SAYS PART OF FIN ON MACON WAS CARRIED AWAY

Sailor on Surface Vessel Who Saw Crash of Airship Is Witness Before Navy Court of Inquiry.

ON EVEN KEEL WHEN ACCIDENT OCCURRED

Investigators Also Are Told That Repairs on Dirigible Were Uncompleted at Time of Disaster.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16.—The forward part of the upper fin on the dirigible Macon seemed to be carried away just before the airship crashed in rain and fog into the Pacific Ocean last Tuesday night, Charles Wilkie, a signal man on the U. S. S. Houston, testified today before the navy court of inquiry.

Wilkie said he was aboard the Houston about five miles from the Macon when something seemed to go wrong with the dirigible.

"When I saw her she was on a course northwest," he testified. "She was on an even keel at the time but the forward part of the upper fin seemed to be carried away.

"There seemed to be a big ink spot, dark and irregular. Then she rose up into a white cloud."

The Macon sank in the ocean off Point Sur, witnesses have testified, within an hour after some of her controls were disabled and two of the 12 "lifting" cells of helium were deflated. Two men lost their lives, the other 81 men aboard being saved by ships maneuvering near her.

Yesterday's Testimony; Repairs Were Uncompleted.

Lieut. Galvin M. Bolster of the Macon, testifying yesterday, said three girders in the ship's tail had sheared several months ago and only minor repairs had been made since then because of orders from the Bureau of Aeronautics that the work should not interfere with the training flights.

"This work," he told the board, "had not been completed when the Macon started on her last flight." But he said, he did not consider the craft unsafe for flight over the ocean even with the repairs unfinished.

"I felt the ship was safe to fly in anything but extremely violent air," he declared.

In recalling the buffeting which the Macon received in a storm last April in Texas, he said, "We had a close call. It was only by the prompt work on the part of the crew that we were able to save the ship and keep the fin from coming off."

Another Tells of Weakness.

An indication of structural weakness also was given by R. J. Davis, chief boatswain's mate, one of two crew men on duty near the "casualty" spot in the rear.

All four fins, two horizontal and two vertical, were fastened to an allegedly weak girder, known technically as "No. 17½."

Commander P. L. Gatch, judge-advocate of the court, made inquiries to determine if progressive bumpings encountered in anchoring the Macon at its Sunnyvale base might have strained the girder. The lower fin was attached to the ground car in the anchoring operation.

Lieut. Bolster said it was possible, but he did not see how such jars could hurt the upper part of the girder where the casualty occurred. He held the forward part of the top fin was the first to give way before the Macon fell. Boatswain Davis thought the trouble was in the after part of the same top fin.

It was brought out the Texas break occurred at the top fin's juncture with girder 17½.

Thinks Fabric Was Sound.

Disposing of a previous theory that the control gear might have been tangled by a loose piece of fabric, Bolster said he was convinced the fabric was sound until the time of the casualty.

"Apparently the entire fin structure was torn away and it took part of the hull with it," Bolster declared.

John S. Reppy, the Macon's repair officer, said he had cautioned two men against jumping from the dirigible until the bow sank further. One of them was Florentino Esquina, mess attendant, who went down with the ship. He did not know the other man, but was sure it was not Radioman E. E. Dailey, the other man lost.

T. C. Brandes told the court of inquiry: "I went down a rope over the side. When I got to the end of the rope I was still 25 feet from the water. And the life raft which had been there a few minutes before had disappeared. I was embarrassed because I could not swim. But I dropped into the water anyway. I was picked up later."

ELEVATOR MEN VOTE STRIKE IN NEW YORK

Last-Minute Conferences Held on Walkout of Building Service Employes.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16. — With more than 10,000 workers shouting unanimous approval of a general building service strike, union leaders sought a last-minute conference with Mayor La Guardia in an effort to avert the walkout, set for Monday night.

James J. Bambrick, president of the Building Service Employes' Union which voted the strike, said he could mobilize 200,000 building employes throughout the city within 24 hours. The strike was approved by the union members at a mass meeting last night.

Within a few hours after the strike had been authorized, there was a shooting at a Harlem apartment house. Two men were shot as police fired to break up a clash between striking employes and several elevator operators who remained on duty. Another man was treated for cuts and bruises suffered in the apartment house clash. Three men were arrested at a Bronx apartment house for beating Edward Farnzberg, who began work as an elevator operator there yesterday.

The union mass meeting voted for a strike after rejecting the award of Mayor La Guardia's Arbitration Committee headed by Major Henry H. Curran. This provided minimum wages of $70 to $90 a month for apartment building elevator operators and other employes, $22 a week to office building employes and $20 a week to loft building employes.

City officials moved today to take emergency measures. Called together by Mayor LaGuardia today were the police and fire commissioners, officials of the health and hospital departments, Ben Golden, executive secretary of the Regional Labor Board, and Benedict Wolf, executive officer of the National Labor Board of Washington.

IOWA DRUG PEDDLER SHOT TO DEATH IN KANSAS CITY

Body of Sioux City "Public Enemy No. 1" Is Found at Wheel of Auto.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 16.—A man 35 years old, with papers bearing the name of Erwin Robert Swan of Sioux City, Ia., was found dead behind the wheel of a new automobile here last night, a bullet wound in his head. Powder burns indicated he had been shot at close range and police said he possibly had been killed by someone riding with him.

By the Associated Press.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Feb. 16.—Police here said Robert Swan, shot to death in Kansas City last night, was "Sioux City's Public Enemy No. 1." He had been arrested many times on charges of illegal possession and sale of narcotics. In 1933 after arrest by Federal officers he was sent to jail for six months. Last January he was arrested, taken to Omaha and there indicted in Federal Court on a narcotic charge. That indictment was hanging over him at the time of his death.

Police said Swan was the head of a drug-selling ring.

Soviet Russia Takes Up Baseball.

MOSCOW, Feb. 16.—The Soviet Government decided today to sponsor a program for introducing baseball throughout the Soviet Union as a national sport. A special baseball section was ordered to be organized as part of the Supreme Council of Physical Culture.

PAROLED CONVICT ADMITS KILLING DEPUTY SHERIFF

Kelch Irwin Tells Police at East St. Louis He Shot Officer in Raid at Bloomington, Ill.

PRISONER SHOWN OWN REVOLVER

Weapon Which He Said He Threw in River Is Recovered After Its Sale to Pawnshop.

Kelch Irwin, a paroled convict, confessed to East St. Louis police last night that he shot and killed A. L. Vonsar, Bloomington (Ill.) deputy sheriff, while escaping from a raid on Jan. 28.

Sheriff Elmer G. Swearingen and State's Attorney Jesse Willis of Bloomington arrived in East St. Louis shortly after the confession was made, carrying a warrant charging Irwin with murder. They announced they would take him to Bloomington today and the prisoner indicated he would plead guilty.

The admission of guilt, which came after hours of questioning, was obtained by Sergt. Mike O'Rourke, former vaudeville actor and pantomime performer, who reenacted the killing and thrust the revolver that Irwin thought he had disposed of into the prisoner's face.

Capture and Questioning.

When captured at 2007 Trendley avenue, East St. Louis, the home of Bernard Moter, also a paroled convict from Leavenworth penitentiary, Irwin had said he was James Thomas, a transient. A little later, however, he had admitted his identity and that he was in the Bloomington rooming house when Vonsar, former United States Secret Service agent, was killed.

He had said he did not shoot Vonsar in a hallway of the house, but had fled behind the deputy's back without firing a shot after Vonsar and other officers had entered to arrest him and two companions for a series of holdups near Paducah, Ky. Irwin had admitted further that he had stolen an automobile to make his escape and had held up a filling station attendant in Taylorville, whom he robbed of $50. The revolver he used in that holdup, he said he threw into the Mississippi River.

Officer's Story of Pistol.

"Oh, no you didn't," O'Rourke retorted. "I'll tell you what you did with that pistol. You brought it here to East St. Louis and you gave it to your friend Armand Rohr; your friend Armand Rohr that you met when you and he were in Leavenworth together; you gave it to him to sell.

"And Rohr sold it in a pawnshop right here in East St. Louis. And he double-crossed you. He sold it for $6 and he came back and told you he'd sold it for $5. I'll get it and stick it right under your nose and show you."

"You seem to know everything," Irwin said weakly. "You bet I do," Sergt. O'Rourke said. "Everything about this murder."

O'Rourke went out of the room and returned in a moment with a blue-steel .38 caliber revolver. "Here it is. Here's the gun you killed Vonsar with. We've already sent the bullet from Vonsar's body to ballistics experts in Chicago. We can prove it came from this gun. And we will prove it."

Advice to Prisoner.

O'Rourke's voice dropped to a friendly, pleading tone as he continued: "You've heard your mother say that while there's life, there's hope. Well, we have the bullet and we have the gun. And if you plead not guilty you're going to be found guilty by a jury and you'll burn. And once that switch is turned on you won't have any hope. Or any life either.

"But if you go before a Judge and plead guilty; well, the majority of Judges won't give you the chair."

Irwin shifted uneasily in his seat and said, almost inaudibly, "I'll tell everything."

'SALES TAX SOCKS THE POOR'

Comment by Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania on Levy.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16.—Gov. George H. Earle described the sales tax yesterday as a "sock-the-poor" measure. "At first glance," he said at Temple University, "it seems an excellent method in this emergency, but when you dissect it, it is found that average citizens spend all their income in Pennsylvania while the wealthier ones spend only a small part of theirs in the State. That is why I say the sales tax is a 'sock-the-poor' tax."

Gov. Earle and William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to Russia, received honorary LL.D. degrees from the university.

TWO GET DEATH FOR MURDER WITH BUBONIC GERMS

Landowner and Physician Convicted After Trial at Alipore, India — Two Other Doctors Acquitted.

PLOT FOR ESTATE AND INSURANCE

Victim Escaped Infection From Bacilli Mailed to Him—Later Jabbed With Hypodermic Needle.

By the Associated Press.

CALCUTTA, India, Feb. 16.—Two of four men accused of murder with bubonic plague germs were found guilty at Alipore today and given death sentences. The others were acquitted.

They were charged with having obtained the bacilli and injecting the serum into the victim, a step-brother of Benayendra Pande, who was given the death sentence along with Dr. Taranath Battacharya. The doctors acquitted are Sivapada Bhattacharya and Durgatran Dhar.

The conspiracy, the prosecutor charged, began in February, 1932. Benayendra Pande, a Bengal land owner, decided to obtain the estate of his step-brother, Amarendra, from which a $6000 annual income was derived, plus $4000 worth of insurance. He enlisted the aid, it was charged, of the three doctors.

A tube of germs was mailed to the victim from Bombay, but he escaped infection. A pair of pince nez was infected, but this did not prove successful.

Finally two of the doctors went to Bombay, where they obtained more bacilli at a research institute. After testing the germs on rats, the doctors returned to Calcutta.

One day, while Amarendra Pande was in a crowded railroad station, he was jabbed with a hypodermic needle containing the germs. He died and a certificate was issued, giving septic pneumonia as the cause of death.

NEW HIGH FOR ILLINOIS RELIEF

Cost $12,528,243 in January; 316,283 Families Aided.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—A million and a quarter residents of Illinois were on relief in January and cost the State and Federal governments $12,528,243, the monthly statement of the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission showed yesterday. The money, which set an all-time high record for relief expenditures, went for the care of 316,283 families, the report stated.

Cook County required $7,154,877 of the total relief funds in January, while the 101 other counties in the State shared the remaining $4,793,061.

HAUPTMANN TAKEN TO STATE PENITENTIARY

Condemned Murderer of Lindbergh Baby Closely Guarded on Motor Trip to Trenton.

HE TALKS ABOUT ISADOR FISCH

For the First Time He Says He Thinks Former Partner Had Actual Hand in Kidnaping.

By the Associated Press.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 16.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, condemned to die for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, arrived at the New Jersey State prison today at 10:31 a. m., after a slow trip from the Hunterdon County jail over slippery roads.

The 24-mile trip from Flemington was made in 55 minutes. Hauptmann was led into the main entrance of the prison. The door closed behind him at 10:32 o'clock.

"I am innocent," Hauptmann said, as he walked up the steps of the prison. This was in reply to a request for a "last word."

The State Police escort evaded the crowd of 500 persons who were gathered at one end of the prison by going around the opposite end.

Warden Harry O. McCrea of the Flemington jail said that Hauptmann spoke very little on the trip. He thanked the Warden for the treatment he had been accorded in the Flemington jail.

"Everything's fine," he said.

In the prison, Hauptmann was taken to a side room, where the commitment papers were given to Irving Bleam, prison clerk. Hauptmann immediately was labeled Prisoner No. 17,400.

Taken to the Death House.

He posed for photographers, still manacled to his guards. Then some one placed a microphone in front of him. There was no expression on his face as he spoke into it. He leaned forward and in a clear voice and said again "I'm innocent."

Hauptmann was in Bleam's office only a few minutes before he was led away to the death house. Down the main corridor he walked between his guards, out into a small yard where he saw sunshine again and then into the little red brick death house.

His cell, No. 9, is the last one on the first tier and adjoins the death chamber. Should Hauptmann lose his appeal from his conviction, he will take only six steps to the chair.

A few minutes after committing their prisoner to the State's care, Sheriff John H. Curtiss and Warden McCrea emerged from the prison and entered their car for the drive back to Flemington.

Curtiss said there had been no disturbance either as Hauptmann left Flemington or on the way. "I'm glad that's over," he said.

Col. George L. Selby, acting principal keeper, said Hauptmann brought no valuables with him. Sheriff Curtiss said, however, he brought a box of cigars that had been given the prisoner at Flemington.

At 11:15 a. m., less than 45 minutes after Hauptmann entered the prison, he had his dinner of pork and sauerkraut, dessert and coffee.

The Rev. John Mathiesen, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church, who speaks with a pronounced German accent, offered his services as spiritual counselor to Hauptmann on behalf of the Lutheran Inter-Missionary Society of Philadelphia. Hauptmann is a Lutheran.

Departure From Flemington.

Hauptmann appeared on the front steps of the Flemington jail at 9:35 a. m., handcuffed to Warden McCrea and Lieutenant Smith, who has been in charge of the detail of New Jersey State Troopers chaged with his custody since his removal to New Jersey.

The three, surrounded by State Troopers, paused on the steps long enough to satisfy photographers and then proceeded to the rear of the jail. They then got into the waiting cars and started the trip to Trenton.

The motorcade included four automobiles in which were Sheriff Curtiss, deputy sheriffs and a detachment of State troopers. No motorcycle escort was provided because of the slipper condition of the road from Flemington to Trenton.

Hauptmann was in the back seat of the second car with his pair of manacled guards. The car was driven by Sergeant James Crawford of the State Police. Beside him sat Sheriff Curtiss.

When Hauptmann paused on the jail house steps he smiled broadly and spoke in German to a repre-

BOAT AFIRE, 2 DIVERS DIE AT BOTTOM OF SEA

Burned Wreckage of Sponge Craft and Helmets Disclose Fate of Fishers.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 16.—A story of death by suffocation 36 feet under the surface of the Gulf of Mexico was disclosed yesterday by the fire-charred wreckage of the sponge fishing boat Xios and bones and diving helmets of two members of the crew found on the sea floor 12 miles off Cedar Keys, Fla.

The Xios and crew of five had not been heard from since November, 1933, until Gabull Peterson, owner of the sponge boat Gabriel, found the relics Wednesday and gave the news of its fate to the sponge fishing colony at Tarpon Springs, home of the missing men.

Peterson thinks fire aboard the Xios cut off the air supply of the divers gathering sponges on the sea bottom. He said the helmets of the divers were still attached to the metal parts of the under-water suits, indicating that the men had died at their work. Those aboard the boat, Peterson concluded, either perished in the flames or jumped overboard and drowned.

The five members of the Xios' crew were John Gianetsis, captain, Nick Gianetsis, diver; Spiros Papatemetrios, air-line tender; Dennis Alefantis, engineer, and Nathaniel Sloan, Negro deckhand.

The Xios left Tarpon Springs early in November for the sponge fishing banks, and a few days later put in at Cedar Keys for gasoline. The boat and its crew were not seen again after leaving Cedar Keys.

Anxiety for the Xios was not felt until most of the other boats of the sponge fishing fleet had returned for Christmas and the ceremonies held in connection with the feast of Epiphany, a festival observed with much pomp by the Greek sponge colony.

Divers covered a considerable area in the vicinity of the sponge fishing banks, but found no other clews to the fate of the missing vessel.

MRS. MUENCH'S TRIAL PLANNED FOR FEB. 25

State Will Proceed Against Her If Prosecutor Anderson Is Able to Appear.

Associate Prosecuting Attorney Wolfe told reporters at Clayton today that the State will select Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench for trial in the Kelley kidnaping case on Feb. 25, if Prosecuting Attorney Anderson, injured in an assault last October, is able to be in court, as is hoped.

He said notice had been sent to defense counsel.

In the event Prosecutor Anderson is unable to be in court to direct the presentation of the State's case, Bart Davit, jointly docketed with Mrs. Muench for trial before Judge Nolte on the 25th, will be selected for trial. Both have taken severances entitling them to separate trials.

Anderson, who suffered a fractured leg and other injuries when his automobile was crowded off Lindbergh road on Oct. 9, has been at his home at Forder and Ringer roads for the past two weeks, after being in the County Hospital nearly four months. He is exercising several hours a day on his crutches and makes a daily trip to a hospital for treatment.

EIGHT MACHINE-GUNS STOLEN, RAYMOND HAMILTON SUSPECT

Fingerprints on Door of Texas National Guard Armory Identified as Outlaw's.

By the Associated Press.

BEAUMONT, Tex., Feb. 16.—The National Guard Armory here was robbed of eight Browning machine-guns and 3600 rounds of ammunition early today by two young men.

Identification experts said fingerprints on a door indicated that one of the thieves was the condemned bank robber, Raymond Hamilton.

Hamilton escaped from the Texas Penitentiary death house last summer and from a recent police trap in Dallas.

The two robbers overpowered and blindfolded the armory caretaker when the caretaker found them in the armory supply room.

DEMOCRATS WORKING TO PASS JOB BILL NEXT WEEK

Party Leaders Seek to Line Up Dissenters in Ranks Behind $4,000,000,000 Works Program—Debate to Continue Monday.

GREEN PLEADS FOR PREVAILING WAGES

Vandenberg Calls Measure 'Gargantuan Grab Bag;' Opposes 'Unconscionable Surrender of Legislature's Function.'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Administration leaders in the Senate planned to devote the week-end to efforts to pacify Democratic critics of the $4,880,000,000 works and relief bill, with the hope of putting the measure through next week.

After more debate on the bill Monday, Senator McCarran (Dem.), Nevada, intends to introduce a motion to return it to the Appropriations Committee with instructions that the $880,000,000 for direct relief be separated from the rest of the measure and reported out for speedy action. He intended also to continue on the floor his effort to require payment of prevailing wages on public works projects.

A movement to limit the duration of the bill so that grants could not be made from it during the 1936 Presidential campaign is being supported by Senate Republicans. Under the measure as now worded, the money would be available until June 30, 1937. The Republican Senators agreed to fight for an amendment which would prevent the President from making any allocations for work relief projects after June 30, 1936.

Green Opposes Wage Substitute.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, wrote to each Senator today opposing the administration-supported substitute for the McCarran prevailing wage amendment. Green termed it "unsatisfactory and unacceptable to labor."

The substitute, approved by the Appropriations Committee, "will in no way protect labor in its efforts to preserve wage standards set in different communities as a result of years of struggle and effort on the part of organized labor," Green declared.

Instead of requiring the payment of prevailing wages on all public works projects, the substitute would permit the President to fix different rates of wages for various types of work, and would require him to establish the prevailing wage in any community where a lower rate of pay was found to be adversely affecting the general scale.

"We sincerely wish and desire," Green said, "that standard rates of pay established in each community shall be guarded preserved and protected. We are of the opinion that a relief wage established on a lower basis than the prevailing rates of pay will tear down our wage standards and either directly or indirectly cause reductions in the wages of American working people.

"For this reason I appeal to you in behalf of labor to vote against the Russell amendment and to support the amendment offered by Senator McCarran, providing for the recognition, observance and protection of prevailing rates of pay in each community."

Effect of Vandenberg's Speech.

There was considerable speculation regarding the effect on Democratic discindents of the attack made on the measure from the Senate floor yesterday by Senator Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan. Charging that it would "retard recovery" and fail to meet the relief problem, Vandenberg sarcastically proposed this substitute:

"1. Congress hereby appropriates $4,880,000,000 to the President to use as he pleases.

"2. Anybody who doesn't like it is fined $1000."

Senator Adams (Dem.), Colorado, predicted that Vandenberg's speech, because of its source and "partisanship," would strengthen the administration's forces and cause some Democrats to oppose changes in the bill which otherwise they would have favored.

McCarran thought Vandenberg and Senator Steiwer (Rep.), Oregon, who also attacked the bill, had made a good analysis of the measure.

Vandenberg said he opposed the measure because "it is an uncon-

ROOSEVELT PLANS NRA MESSAGE FOR CONGRESS MONDAY

He Is Expected to Ask for One-Year Extension With Authority to Make It Two If He Chooses.

FRIENDLY INQUIRY BEGINS IN SENATE

Hostile Investigation Side-Tracked as King, Borah and McGill Prepare to Hold Hearings.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—President Roosevelt intends to send his recommendations for the new NRA to Congress Monday.

In his message he is expected to propose a one-year extension of the National Recovery Administration with authority to make it two years if he deems the extension advisable.

Roosevelt kept his calling list comparatively free today to work on his recommendations.

As word of the NRA message came from the White House a Senate Judiciary Sub-committee assembled to investigate charges of "monopoly" under the NRA. This meeting and another proposal for an inquiry before the Senate Finance Committee forecast a harassed journey through Congress for any new NRA legislation.

King Committee Starts Work.

Senator King (Dem.), Utah, and his sub-committee started its investigation of the NRA today. Senators Borah (Rep.), Idaho, and McGill (Dem.), Kansas, are the other members of the sub-committee.

The investigation of any monopolistic tendencies under the NRA was assured when administration leaders swept aside a proposal for a broader inquiry and shunted the work into the hands of a friendly committee.

Russell Hardy, special assistant to the Attorney-General on anti-trust cases, was the sub-committee's first witness. It locked its doors before starting the questioning. King said the first meeting "was merely a preliminary consultation." Later, he said, the hearings would probably be opened.

The King committee hearing is distinct from those to be held on the inquiry into the NRA proposed yesterday by Senators Nye (Rep.), North Dakota, and McCarran (Dem.), Nevada. The resolution for this wide investigation, despite the protest of its authors, was referred to the Finance Committee, headed by Senator Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, administration leader.

Harrison's Plan.

Harrison let it be known almost at once that his committee would take no action until it received the President's message making recommendations for the reorganization of the NRA. Then, he said, NRA officials will be called and the entire question gone into in detail.

Nye and McCarran made it plain that such an arrangement would be unsatisfactory to them. "A mere perfunctory questioning of NRA officials will not be sufficient," Nye said. "We want a thoroughgoing investigation, which will enable business men to go before the committee and make their complaints."

The King sub-committee has the authorization of the full committee to make its investigation. King reported the resolution under which it is acting to the Senate yesterday for reference to the audit committee, which must act on a proposed expenditure of $5000 in connection with the inquiry.

"We're going ahead anyway," King said. "If we get the money, so much the better, but if not we'll do the best we can without it."

Borah's membership on the sub-committee was considered significant. He has made numerous charges of monopoly against the NRA, and with Nye, a year ago, was successful in having the Darrow board appointed to review the situation.

HEARINGS ON 30-HOUR-WEEK COMPLETED BY SENATE GROUP

Representative of Retailers Opposes Bill, A. F. of L. Man Argues for It.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—A Senate Judiciary subcommittee concluded hearings on the 30-hour week bill today and will meet, probably Monday, to take action.

Today's witnesses were Rivers Peterson of Indianapolis, editor of Hardware Retailer and spokesman for the Retailers' National Council, and W. Jett Lauck, economist for the American Federation of Labor.

Peterson, who said the council represents 200,000 retail stores, opposed the bill, asserting it would increase costs 25 per cent, and that retailers have no profits or prospective profits through which the increase could be absorbed. He termed the bill "not only unnecessary, but also destructive and mischievous."

Lauck argued that the bill would accomplish "what NRA attempted but failed." He said NRA has "been in stagnation since March, 1934, due to the decision of code authorities to hold fast to profits."

Hauptmann is Taken to State Penitentiary

sentative of a German newspaper.

"I am innocent," he said. "Come and see me (meaning at the State prison at Trenton)."

As the door to the warden's office opened the first to emerge were State Troopers, who massed about the cars standing guard until the prisoner was brought out. Next came Under Sheriff A. K. Barrowcliff and Sheriff Curtiss. Hauptmann followed with his guards.

Behind the group of three came more troopers who virtually locked-stepped with them to the waiting automobiles so carefully were the preparations made.

Hauptmann wore the same gray overcoat and brown felt hat he wore when he was brought to Flemington from the Bronx, and the gray suit that he wore every day in the courtroom during his trial.

He stepped along with his characteristic brisk walk. His guards quickly adjusted their pace to his so that on the narrow sidewalk around the jail, one of them slightly preceded him and the other followed. Despite a smile, he showed the tension and nervous strain from which he obviously was suffering.

Just before his departure he was visited at his cell by Hovey Low, the Deputy Sheriff who sat beside him throughout his trial and with whom he developed a friendship. Hauptmann autographed one of his photographs for Low as his last act before he left the cell block.

Low said that Hauptmann showed increasing signs of nervousness as the time for departure arrived but that the restraint and self-control exhibited by him throughout the trial was still evident.

Only about 50 townspeople were present to see Hauptmann depart. They were kept at a distance from the jail entrance by the line of State troopers. Only newspaper representatives were allowed to approach the jail steps.

Hauptmann's entrance into the car in which he was to ride to Trenton was the signal for a rush of the small group. They ran to the front of the courthouse, scrambling for vantage positions from which to watch the procession turn out of the little side street and head south down Flemington's main street for Trenton.

More About Isador Fisch.

In a newspaper interview from his Flemington cell last night, Hauptmann expressed the belief that Isador Fisch "must have done the kidnaping."

It was the first time Hauptmann has publicly accused Fisch, his dead business partner, and the man on whom the defense sought to saddle the crime during the trial by asserting he had left the $14,000 in ransom bills with Hauptmann.

"Funny," Hauptmann said to the reporters, "but at first I don't think Fisch could do the kidnaping to get the money."

"But later I do. He can't do it alone, either. No. He can't."

To reports that authorities were searching for an accomplice in the kidnaping, there was given official denial from all sources.

C. Lloyd Fisher, Hauptmann's attorney, said the prisoner's confidence was renewed and that he looked forward to eventual exoneration.

In a public statement, Hauptmann declared: "Before God I swear I have nothing whatever to do with the kidnaping and murder of this child and that I know nothing whatever in connection with the crime."

Fisher said the statement, quite lengthy, was dictated solely by Hauptmann, with only some necessary corrections and rephrasings made necessary by Hauptmann's German tongue.

First Step Toward Appeal.

The prisoner yesterday took his first step in appealing his conviction. He signed a petition to Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, who sentenced him, asking that the defense be supplied a copy of the trial record at the expense of New Jersey, and swore a pauper's oath that he could not afford to appeal the case otherwise.

Fisher said he expected to submit the petition to Justice Trenchard in Trenton next Tuesday.

The next step in the proceedings would be to obtain a writ of error from the Court of Errors and Appeals at Trenton. Such a writ would serve as an automatic stay of execution until the court hears the case at its next term starting May 12.

Fisher estimated appeal costs at $25,000, of which about $10,000 would go for the cost of printing the record.

The petition, Fisher said, would be submitted under a New Jersey statute permitting a defendant, swearing poverty, to petition the trial Judge to charge up to the State the cost of furnishing the defense with a copy of the record. The decision, however, is discretionary with Justice Trenchard.

Appeal for Contributions.

In the meantime, Hauptmann hopes that voluntary contributions will be made to aid his attorneys. He made another public appeal for contributions and constituted Fisher trustee of the defense fund. About $70 was reported to have been received. The appeal was given widespread publicity through Yorktown and other German localities in New York City.

The principal trial figures have scattered widely. Attorney-General David T. Wilentz boarded a train for Miami and a vacation; Betty Gow, the Lindbergh nursemaid, sailed for Glasgow; Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, grandmother of the murdered baby, leaves today for Mexico, D. F., with members of her family.

Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, thin and showing the strain of her court vigil, took up residence in the Bronx with her niece, Mrs. Hans Mueller. She received "hundreds and hundreds" of letters of sympathy and expressions of belief in her husband's innocence, she said.

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, at Trenton, had received a cable from Frau Paulina Hauptmann, begging a pardon for her son. Hauptmann also received a cable from Frau Hauptmann, reading: "I believe in you always. Your trusting mother."

"I can only explain to her," Gov. Hoffman said concerning the cable to him, "that the procedure is to appeal to the Court of Errors and Appeals. After that the case will come before me as a member of the Court of Pardons."

ROYAL PAIR REACH JAMAICA

Duke and Duchess of Kent Cheered by Crowds in Kingston.

By the Associated Press.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Feb. 16.—A rousing reception greeted the Duke and Duchess of Kent as the royal newlyweds arrived in Kingston today from Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

After driving through the streets amid cheering lanes of Jamaicans, they lunched with Gov. and Lady Denham at King's House. Later they motored to Montego Bay, where they will remain about two weeks.

ADRIFT ON ICE IN ARCTIC

Two Lighthouse Employes Carried Away at Archangel.

ARCHANGEL, U. S. S. R., Feb. 16.—The Icebreaker Sedov joined airplanes in a search today for two lighthouse employes carried to sea on a block of ice Wednesday with only a loaf of bread for food.

It was feared that the men would freeze as they were not wearing furs when the block broke away from the frozen shore. They have a gun with them.

DEMOCRATS HOPE TO PASS JOB BILL WITHIN A WEEK

scionable surrender of the legislature's functions, and a corresponding concentration of equally unconscionable power in a relatively irresponsible bureaucracy.

"It is a blind adventure which commits the country to a year of uncertainty at a moment when the return of stability is vital to a restoration of normal commerce.

"It is not calculated to produce adequate and essential relief, but it is calculated to retard recovery, if we guess correctly what the administration contemplates."

Vandenberg referred to the bill as a "Gargantuan grab bag," and urged the Senate to defeat it and demand a more "rational and intelligent prospectus."

"It is a blank check for the biggest sum of money ever passed in a single transaction," Vandenberg said, "and the use of the money is so unbounded, that it can warp the lives and livelihoods of every man, woman and child in the land, and even the character of American institutions."

Writing Laws for States.

He said the administration was now writing laws for state Legislatures to pass in order to co-operate with the Federal Government and that there was feverish anxiety to comply because "Santa Claus is coming to town."

Administration of the measure by "unknown and unnamed" subordinates, he said, would be "a hapless paraphrase of carpet-bagging government."

He emphasized that Republicans were not opposed to relief and recommended that the $880,000,000 item be passed to meet immediate needs pending submission by the administration of what he called a "more feasible" measure.

Near the end of the 15,000 word speech, Senate Black (Dem.), Alabama, told Vandenberg he could not determine whether the Senator was for or against a public works program.

The President's Intentions.

Vandenberg said the bill would permit the Government to compete with any business it pleased; but Senator O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, asserted after a visit to the White House that the President was determined to authorize no projects which would result in such competition.

O'Mahoney also said the President gave him "full assurance for maintenance of rates of wages in private industry in connection with the proposed work relief program."

O'Mahoney told reporters: "President Roosevelt, of course, will use all his influence to maintain rates of wages and standards in private industry. Thus there can be no adverse effect on labor or business under the work relief program."

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt, when asked at a press conference if he felt he could spend the proposed $4,000,000,000 appropriation for work relief within a year or 15 months, if the Senate voted to limit the bill to that period, replied he would do the best he could.

Norris Predicts Congress Will Pass Bill With Little Change.

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 16.—Senator George W. Norris (Rep.), Nebraska, predicted congressional approval without important change of President Roosevelt's $4,880,000,000 works-relief program, in an address yesterday before a joint session of the Nebraska Legislature.

Norris, who supported President Roosevelt in his 1932 campaign, condemned partisanship "when men and women are starving."

"I have every confidence in the ability, the honesty and the sincerity of the President," Norris said. "He is our leader and he has selected a program. We should follow him."

He predicted that Congress would let the President decide how the program was to be administered.

Voicing his opposition to the dole, he said: "I would rather spend more money and give jobs than spend less money just to feed the hungry and get no return for it." He said the dole would lower the standards of the people until "many of them won't want jobs."

SHIP ARCHITECT TELLS SENATORS OF HIS 'CONTACTS'

Admits Under Contempt Threat He Stretched Story About Admiral's Stand on Contract.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Confronted by a threat of citation for contempt, A. P. Homer, Washington marine architect, testified before the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday that the efforts of the White House, the Navy Departments and several shipbuilders had been combined in apportioning naval building jobs in 1933 among the shipyards—regardless of low bidders.

"I think the distribution was made by our great President," Homer said heatedly at one time, "not merely on the question of legality but on a basis of humanity."

Another mention of the White House came indirectly when a letter was introduced attributing to Mrs. Mary Eben, one of Mrs. Roosevelt's secretaries, "some magic charm for business done with the administration."

Questioned About "Contacts."

Homer was on the stand all day, notwithstanding he once reminded the committee that his blood pressure was dangerously high. His attitude ranged from defiance to cheerful compliance under questioning by committee members into the wide range of his "contacts."

These included, he disclosed at various times, associations with printing press companies, naval officials, with Democratic National headquarters during the 1932 presidential campaign, and finally with President Roosevelt.

"I have had Mr. Roosevelt at my home many times," Homer told the committee, but indicated it was prior to Mr. Roosevelt's election to the presidency.

The threat of a contempt citation grew out of his refusal at first to explain what he meant when he represented Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of construction of the Navy, as indicating the Navy approved of an alleged agreement among three smaller ship yards for a distribution of destroyer jobs by negotiation, rather than bidding.

He professed inability to remember and finally refused to answer as to a conversation he had held with Admiral Land, with reference to which he later quoted the Admiral as saying he felt a destroyer job should go to the Bath Iron Works of Bath, Me., a client of Homer's.

The threat made by Clark of Missouri caused him to change his mind, and he conceded he had "stretched" his statement about Land. "Apologize for the error," he said.

"Jerry" and "Pete."

Homer referred to Admiral Land as "Jerry," and to W. S. Newell, president of the Bath Iron Works, as "Pete." He confirmed previous testimony that he had kept a "diary," in which he represented that he had interceded with President Roosevelt for his client, the Bath yards.

The committee introduced a letter from Homer to Newell.

Admiral Land "feels as you do," he wrote to Newell on May 25, 1933, "that when the big program comes through several of the 1500-ton (destroyers) will perhaps fit you better." He explained that the yards could not handle cruisers and larger craft.

"Tell the committee how much you stretched the story Admiral Land told you," demanded Senator Clark. "I refuse to answer," replied Homer, after a moment's hesitation. "Then I, am prepared" to ask the committee to cite you for contempt," Clark shot back.

After a conference with his attorney, Homer finally answered:

"I reached the conclusion as to what I stated in my letter on the basis of a conversation I held with Admiral Land, but it was not based on any statement of Admiral Land."

The letter about Mrs. Eben, whose White House connection was not described to the committee, was written by W. M. Rice of Gielowz, Inc., New York engineering firm, to Homer.

Text of Letter.

Dated Aug. 15, 1934, the letter said: "Who is Mrs. Mary Eben? She has some magic charm for business done with the administration, providing your bonding and insurance business is given to her husband, Mr. Eben.

"It has been suggested to me by several people that she is in a position to hurry up the consideration of the navy patrol boats and possibly to make suggestions as to who should be the central drawing office.

"What is your thought in this matter?"

Homer said he had not identified her for the firm, but went on to explain that construction of patrol boats by the Navy Department was at present under consideration.

The questioning veered to information brought out earlier that Homer had written letters from Democratic headquarters to shipbuilding agencies and others in 1932 soliciting contributions to the campaign.

He denied any money had been contributed by those he solicited. "Some were very caustic in their replies, that I was backing the wrong horse."

FARLEY, LONG TO BE CALLED BEFORE SENATE COMMITTEE

Group Wants to Hear Them Before Acting on Demand for Investigation of Postmaster-General.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Chairman McKellar of the Senate Post-office Committee said today that both Postmaster General Farley and Senator Long (Dem.), Louisiana, would be invited to appear before the committee before it decided what to do about Long's demand for an investigation of Farley's alleged connection with public works contracts.

Long presented charges that supplies for a public building contract had been obtained from a company with which Farley formerly had been identified.

Meanwhile Secretary of the Interior Ickes said today he was searching Public Works Administration files to see if there were any reports of investigations of Farley such as the Senate requested yesterday on the motion of Long.

Asked how the PWA happened to begin investigation of Farley, the Secretary quickly replied "I never investigated Mr. Farley."

He said he would send the data to the Senate "as soon as I get the papers assembled," but added:

"I do not know if there are any papers about Mr. Farley. If there are, then in due and reasonable time I will submit them to the Senate."

The files of Ickes were requested by the Senate following Long's four-day campaign, demanding an investigation of the Postmaster General's record.

In addition to reported personal disagreements with Ickes, the Postmaster-General is understood to have resented some of the activities of Louis R. Glavis, his chief of investigations.

CODOS AND ROSSI ON FLIGHT FROM FRANCE TO ARGENTINA

Aviators Pass Over Morocco in Attempt to Beat Their Record of 5657 Miles.

By the Associated Press.

ISTRES, France, Feb. 16.—Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi, holders of the world's long distance flight record, were passing over Morocco this afternoon, headed for a non-stop South Atlantic crossing to Buenos Aires, trying to set a new record.

They took off at 6:36 a. m. (12:36 a. m., St. Louis time), in their heavily-loaded plane, the Joseph Lebrix, in which they flew in 1933 from New York to Syria, a distance of 5657 miles.

Radio reports from their craft reaching Le Bourget air field placed them over Cap Nao, Spain, traveling at 125 miles an hour, three and one-half hours after the takeoff. At 2:10 p. m. they passed over Tangier, Morocco, and at 3:16 p. m. they were over Rabat, on the northern coast of Africa. Half an hour later the plane passed over Casablanca.

NEW SCOTTSBORO ARGUMENTS BEFORE U. S. SUPREME COURT

Forgery of Negro Names on Jury Roll Book Charged by Defense Lawyers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Forgery of Negro names to a jury roll book in Jackson County, Alabama, was charged before the Supreme Court yesterday by attorneys seeking to save the Negroes in the Scottsboro case from the electric chair. The roll book was presented and Justices examined the names with a magnifying glass.

Samuel Liebowitz of New York, representing the defendants, Clarence Norris and Haywood Patterson, said these "forgeries" constituted an "admission" of his contention that the Negroes convicted of attacking a white girl were denied constitutional rights.

Only six Negro names were on the rolls, Liebowitz told the Supreme Court. He said a difference in ink and the fact that in each instance they were at the end of columns of white names proved they were inserted after impaneling of the grand jury.

LABOR ORGANIZER ON TRIAL IN ARKANSAS FOR ANARCHY

Prosecution Is Result of Agitation for Strike of Relief Workers.

By the Associated Press.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Feb. 16.—Horace Bryan, labor organizer, went on trial here yesterday on charges of anarchy in connection with the agitation for a strike of relief workers in Sebastian County.

Prosecutor Harrell Harper read excerpts from literature identified as having been taken from Bryan, a graduate of Commonwealth College at Mena, Ark. One of the excerpts read:

"Only in one country (Russia) is there a full system of social insurance. This is a product of the Russian revolution. Only by carrying out a similar struggle will we American workers have the fullest security."

MENA, Ark., Feb. 16.—A Legislative Committee investigated charges today that Commonwealth College, a co-operative labor school, sponsored Communism and un-American teachings."

WORKER KILLED BY CONVEYOR

Ermer C. Kuhn, Millwright, Becomes Entangled in Ore Carrier.

Ermer C. Kuhn, 40-year-old millwright, 485 North Twenty-ninth street, East St. Louis, was killed this morning when he became entangled in an ore conveyor while working at the Aluminum Ore Co. plant.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Josephine Kuhn, and two sons. Burial will be in Paragould, Ark.

Police Sergeant Bitten by Dog.

Police Sergt. John Womack was bitten on the right arm last night by a German shepherd dog which accompanied a woman whom Womack ordered out of a restaurant at 507 North Ninth street where she had created a disturbance. The dog was sent to the Humane Society for observation.

'FINDERS KEEPERS,' SAYS JUDGE; TWO BOYS GET $28,000

Poor Youngsters Who Dug Up Gold Coins in Cellar Held to Be Owners.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 16.—"Finders are keepers," Judge Eugene O'Dunne ruled today in awarding to two 16-year-old boys 3558 old gold coins they dug up in the cellar of an old house here. The coins have a face value of $11,427 but, because of their rare coin value Government experts have estimated them to be worth $28,000. None of them was dated later than 1858 and some as early as 1834.

Theodore Jones and Henry Grob, on whom the court bestowed this small fortune, are sons of poor parents. Their families were on municipal relief last August when they made their find. They were digging in the cellar for a place to hide dues from members of their club.

A dozen claimants to the treasure appeared, but Judge O'Dunne eliminated them one by one. In his final ruling, he decided against the owners of the property where the gold was found. Judge O'Dunne held that since the original owner of the gold had "abandoned" it and was now "unknown," it fell legally to the finders.

The boys appeared a little awed when they learned of their good fortune.

"I'm lucky," ejaculated Henry. He decided he was going to buy his mother "a home of her own" and "make her life easy." "That's right," Theodore chimed in. "I'm going to follow Henry."

ILLINOIS WARRANT ISSUED FOR EX-MAYOR IN THEFT

Officer to Leave for California Monday for Man Identified as John S. Schnepp.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 16.—Sangamon County officials made plans yesterday for the return to Springfield of the man identified at Los Angeles as John S. Schnepp, missing former Mayor wanted here for embezzlement. A warrant was sworn out charging Schnepp with embezzling $32,300 from an estate for which he was conservator.

Deputy Sheriff William J. Nattermann said he would leave for Los Angeles Monday night without waiting for an extradition request, which will be forwarded by air mail.

Schnepp has not been indicted but the case will be presented to the March grand jury.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.—John Mason, 70-year-old newspaper vendor, said yesterday he could not remember that he was John S. Schnepp, former Mayor of Springfield, Ill., wanted there on a $400,000 embezzlement charge. He said he could not remember anything prior to Jan. 29, 1932, when the Mayor disappeared from Springfield.

21,667 VOTERS ADDED TO REGISTRATION LIST

Cost of Supplementary Enrollment $60,000, or About $2.75 For Each Name.

There were 21,667 voters enrolled in the supplementary registration Thursday, in preparation for the municipal election. The heaviest proportionate registration was in the Twenty-third Ward, where 1101 persons signed the poll books, or 54 to a precinct, and the lightest was in the Fifteenth, where 522 enrolled, or 21 to a precinct.

Cost of the registration was about $60,000, or about $2.75 for each new voter listed. Previously the registration was 378,660, but many names of voters no longer eligible will be stricken from the records in the canvass which has been started and the net enrollment may be smaller than heretofore.

Fine of Archbishop Upheld.

MEXICO, D. F., Feb. 16.—As result of a decision rendered today by the Supreme Court, Archbishop Pascual Diaz must pay a fine of 500 pesos (about $140) or go to jail for 15 days for officiating outside of his diocese. The Archbishop was fined last November for having performed services at Ixtapalapa, outside the cathedral, but appealed the sentence which the higher court reaffirmed.

HOLC CHARGED WITH GRAFT AT HOUSE HEARING

Agency Attacked by Three Democratic Congressmen and Two Republican—All Urge Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—As one House committee prepared to give the Home Owners Loan Corporation $1,500,000,000 in new capital, another heard five congressmen suggest that Congress investigate reports of everything from "graft" to "inefficiency" in the HOLC.

The banking committe concluded open hearings on the measure to expand the capital of HOLC's from $3,000,000,000 to $4,500,000,000 and took it up in executive session.

Three of the five critics before the rules committee were Democrats. Like the two Republicans, they indorsed the resolution by Sweeney (Dem.), Ohio, for creation of a special House committee of seven to investigate the HOLC.

Sweeney summed up his testimony by asserting that in addition to having heard accusations of "inefficiency," he had received information indicating a "lack of business ability on the part of somebody."

The complaints, he said, came from 45 states. He listed New York, Michigan, New Hampshire, Alabama, Indiana, Texas, Mississippi and Connectitut among them.

The other Congressmen calling for an investigation were Hartley of New Jersey and Bacon of New York, and Hoeppel of California and Pierce of Oregon, Democrats.

Chairman O'Connor of the rules committee sent a telegram today to John H. Fahey, head of the HOLC, stating, "Very serious charges have been testified to concerning the administration of the affairs of your corporation."

Although the letter was not a direct invitation to testify, O'Connor and other committeemen said it would constitute an invitation if Fahey chose so to interpret it.

SIX MONTHS FOR VIOLATION OF 'TREASON CODE' PAROLE

Gordon Hutchins Convicted at Hillsboro, Ill., and Sentenced to State Farm at Vandalia.

By the Associated Press.

HILLSBORO, Ill., Feb. 16.—Gordon Hutchins, 35 years old, one of three men accused of violating probation in the "treason code" case, was convicted of breaking his parole today and was sentenced to six months in the Vandalia penal farm.

City Judge Paul McWilliams of Litchfield, who presided at the trial of Hutchins and 13 other "treason code" defendants, sentenced Hutchins.

Jan Wittenber and John Adams, two other defendants accused of failing to report to the probation officer, have not been found.

TWO YOUNG GERMAN WOMEN REPORTED CONVICTED AS SPIES

Penalty Up to Reichsfuehrer Hitler; Maximum Punishment Is Death.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—Two young German women of good social standing are understood to have been convicted on technical charges of espionage. The names and details were withheld by the authorities, but it is said both were employed as secretaries at the headquarters of the Reichswehr, or German standing army.

Their offense was that they disclosed military secrets to an outsider.

The maximum penalty for espionage is death. The Propaganda Ministry said tonight that their sentences had not yet been made definite. It is understood that their fate is in the hands of Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

W. H. TOBERMAN BECOMES CANDIDATE FOR ALDERMAN

Aspirant in the Mayor's Ward the Fourteenth; Dickmann Says He Will Support Him.

Walter H. Toberman, president of the Toberman Grain Co., announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Alderman from the Fourteenth Ward in Mayor Dickmann's office.

This is the Mayor's ward and Dickmann said he would support Toberman.

Last night the Fourteenth Ward Regular Democratic Organization voted unanimously in favor of Toberman's candidacy, assuring him of general support of the party forces in the ward. Toberman, who resides at 3439 Pestalozzi street, is a member of the Zoning Board of Adjustment.

Alderman August M. Brinkmann, Republican, of the Fourteenth Ward, said today that he probably would not seek re-election.

TRIAL DISCLOSES FORTUNE FROM BURROUGHS STOCK

Maude O. Gibson, Testifying Against Cashier, Tells How $3000 Grew to $3,500,000.

PURCHASE MADE BY HER FATHER

She Declares Henry Giessenbier Mishandled Her Account in Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Bank.

The story of another St. Louis fortune which grew out of a modest investment years ago in the Arithmometer Co., predecessor of the Burroughs Adding Machine Co., continued to unfold today in testimony at the trial of Henry Giessenbier, former cashier of the closed Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Bank, charged with misapplication of $19,700 of its funds.

The witness was Miss Maude O. Gibson, one of the depositors of the bank from whose accounts, the Government alleges, Giessenbier misapplied funds. He is on trial before a jury in Federal Judge Davis' court.

Miss Gibson, 64 years old, is a daughter of the late Dr. James Gibson, St. Louis County physician, who invested $3000 in the Arithmometer stock about the start of the century. The stock he bought at that time, if maintained intact, had a market value of about $3,500,000 at the 1929 peak and at the current price of $15 a share would be worth about $500,000.

Dr. Gibson left his stock in equal shares to his five daughters and three sons. In the years since his death in 1906 they have bought and sold Burroughs stock, and still have extensive holdings.

She Is Cross-Examined.

In cross-examination today Forrest C. Donnell, of defense counsel, led Miss Gibson through a series of purchases of the stock by herself and her sisters, in the years immediately preceding 1929. The witness agreed that Giessenbier had advised these purchases, and that they had been highly profitable.

Miss Gibson said that in February, 1926, Giessenbier told her he had been studying the condition of the Burroughs company, and found that assets the company carried at about $1,000,000 were actually worth about $5,000,000. The stock was selling at $81 a share at the time, and he urged her and her sisters to increase their holdings, she said. As a result, the witness agreed, she had bought 200 shares of the stock, and three of her sisters bought 400 shares. The following year, she said there was a stock dividend of 33 1-3 per cent, and later there was another stock dividend of 25 per cent. Then, in August, 1929, the stock was split, each stockholder getting four shares for one of the old stock.

"So for each 100 shares you had bought after August, 1929, you had 833 shares?" Donnell inquired. The witness said she was not certain of the figures.

From $51,000 to $460,000.

"Well, computing the figures," Donnell continued, "the stock that you and your sisters bought for $81 a share in 1926, paying about $51,000, in August, 1929, was worth $460,000." "I guess that is right," Miss Gibson answered.

Another St. Louis fortune based on the adding machine stock was that of Ehrhardt D. Franz, whose original investment of $21,000 in 1896 grew until the stock had a market value of $27,000,000 at the 1929 peak.

After her father's death, Miss Gibson testified, she maintained herself with the income from the stock left to her, and in 1920 opened an account with the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Bank. Subsequently, Giessenbier, as cashier of the bank, handled many financial matters for her and other members of her family.

She testified that she had never authorized a debit of $2937 to her account in October, 1931. The Government contends that Giessenbier caused that debit to be entered in the account, and used it, together with a $7000 check issued to her brother-in-law, Ernest Boyd, to pay off a debit balance of $9937 in a brokerage account carried in the name "Harry Giesenbier, agent."

Brother-in-Law's Testimony.

Boyd, who preceded Miss Gibson as a witness, denied that he had ever authorized Giessenbier to handle margin brokerage accounts for members of the family. He admitted that in one instance Giessenbier was authorized to pledge 200 shares of Mrs. Boyd's Burroughs stock and 100 shares of Miss Maude Gibson's as collateral for a brokerage account.

Forrest C. Donnell of defense counsel cross-examined Boyd about notes of the family, totaling about $41,000, held by the Scruggs Bank, but disputed by the family. He asked if the witness had not conferred about the notes with C. J. Prince, vice-president of the bank, in December, 1931, and whether he had denied the liability of the family under the notes at that time.

Boyd answered that, while he had not denied liability, he had told Prince that he thought the amounts of the notes were larger than the loans obtained. Donnell brought out that Boyd borrowed an additional $4000 from the bank on the day of the conference with Prince, and contended that such a loan would not have been made had there been any question of the validity of the previous notes.

BRIDGE-END WIDENING ORDINANCE IS PASSED

Aldermen Give Permission for Project on East Approach of Municipal Span.

An ordinance to permit the Illinois State Highway Department to widen the east end of Municipal Bridge at its own expense, estimated at $25,000, was passed unanimously by the Board of Aldermen yesterday. The roadway will be widened from 30 to 65 feet, for 282 feet south from the East St. Louis end of the bridge at Tenth street and Piggott avenue.

This will facilitate traffic movement and eliminate an offset between the bridge head and Tenth street. The Illinois Highway Department agreed to maintain a 24-foot roadway while work was going on and to keep two watchmen on duty to guide traffic.

Action on a bill to reduce the tax on gross receipts of boxing and wrestling matches from 5 to 2 per cent was deferred for a week by a vote of 18 to 10. Chairman Petersen of the Legislation Committee pointed out that another bill was pending in his committee to apply a 2 per cent tax to all professional sports, and he moved to have the boxing and wrestling measure referred back to his group. Vice-President Collins, Democratic leader, held this would be out of order. Alderman Neumann (Rep.), moved to postpone the final action until more information could be obtained.

All of the 10 voting against his motion were Democrats, but six Democrats joined 12 Republicans in voting for it. Alderman Schwartz (Rep.) was absent. Deputy Comptroller Cunningham told the board that the 5 per cent tax had been yielding about $5800 a year, some small bouts barely paying the expense of supervision. He said the 2 per cent rate would pay the annual expenses if there were some largely attended matches.

Having failed to regulate the use of the semicircular driveway at the Twelfth street entrance of City Hall for parking automobiles, city officials have proposed to prohibit parking there altogether, between 7 a. m. and 5 p. m. A bill for that purpose was introduced by Alderman Petersen at the request of the Street Division.

A bill was introduced by Alderman Reinhardt to repeal the ordinances prohibiting parking in Chouteau avenue, between Fourth and Main streets, and on the east side of Broadway, between Chouteau avenue and Convent street. He acted at the request of Hyman Goldstein, who has a tire shop in the Broadway section and a filling station in the Chouteau section. The ordinance ending parking in Chouteau was passed two weeks ago, principally because of a complaint that trucks left in this street interfered with fire apparatus. The Broadway rule has been in effect nearly four years.

Fined $50 for Evading Sales Tax.

William Routman, 3601 Caseyville avenue, East St. Louis, a grocer, paid a fine of $50 in the County Court at Belleville yesterday for evading the State sales tax, to which charge he had pleaded guilty. Routman said he had paid about $600 in back taxes to the State.

COUNTRY-WIDE CUT IN GAS RATES SOUGHT

Head of Cities' Alliance Wants Senate to Investigate Pipe Line Firms.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—John W. Smith, chairman of the newly organized Cities' Alliance, proposed today a widespread investigation of natural gas pipe line companies and their holding companies looking to a country-wide reduction in rates.

Smith, president of the Detroit City Council, asserted that millions of citizens were being forced to pay exorbitant rates for gas, "despite the fact that enough natural gas is being wantonly wasted in the Texas Panhandle to supply their entire domestic and even commercial requirements."

The organization was formed last month at Columbus, O., at a meeting attended by representatives of 18 municipalities from eight midwestern states.

Smith said Congress would be asked to help the Alliance to carry out this program:

"A thorough investigation by the Senate of major natural gas holding companies, whose secret agreements, destruction of competition, allocation of territory and other monopolistic practices are responsible not only for the enormous waste of Texas gas, but likewise for the generally restricted use of natural gas everywhere.

"Enactment of suitable legislation to put interstate natural gas pipe lines under jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, or other appropriate authority.

"Construction with PWA funds of a pipe line from the Texas Panhandle to such cities as want natural gas, but which at present are compelled to negotiate only with pipe line monopolists.

"Investigation by the Department of Justice of charges by the Cities' Alliance that certain major natural gas pipe line companies have flagrantly and defiantly violated the Sherman anti-trust law, and Federal grand jury action wherever such purposeful violations are indicated by further investigation."

AUTO LICENSE ARRESTS BEGIN MONDAY IN ST. LOUIS AREA

Drivers Without State Tags to Be Picked Up; City Sticker Deadline Deferred.

Arrests for failure to have 1935 State automobile licenses will begin Monday in St. Louis and vicinity.

In St. Louis, arrests for failure to have 1935 city licenses were deferred until further notice because many persons have not obtained the stickers yet. The city permits had been issued for only about 80,000 cars, or somewhat more than half of the machines in the city, up to last night. Yesterday about 7000 were sold and there were double lines of applicants extending around the four sides of the City Hall lobby. Applicants waited several hours to be served, while peddlers garnered small coins.

The State license offices at 1701 Chestnut street and in Clayton and Kirkwood have sold about 120,000 licenses, including about 12,000 yesterday. There were two lines of applicants on the streets, each a block or more long, at the Chestnut street office this morning and a line about as long at Clayton.

FARM PRICES REPORTED ABOVE PRE-WAR PARITY

Survey Made of 15 Commodities—Situation May Force Modification of Crop Reduction Program.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — The Agriculture Adjustment Administrator prepared to act today on a finding that the farm prices of 14 basic commodities were 24 per cent above the pre-war parity level.

Food costs, as distinct from farm prices, were shown by the Bureau of Labor Statistics index to be more than 116 per cent of the 1913 level.

While they believe that high prices were due as much to last summer's drouth as to acreage reduction, officials said that as prices stayed at the pre-war level for four or six months they would be forced to abandon control until prices again slipped downward.

May Abandon Payments.

Should the upward tendency continue, a reading of the adjustment law disclosed today, the AAA will be forced to abandon rental and benefit payments on those products that stay at parity. This would mean termination of reductions, as officials do not believe farmers would continue to restrict acreage unless they received cash for so doing.

The AAA has not decided what crops might come within the group to be dropped from the control program.

A study of the chart of farm price tendencies shows that the price the farmer receives, including the benefit payments, is above the pre-war parity level. Without the benefit payments, however, the prices are slightly below.

At the same time, the chart shows that the parity prices have increased, although not as rapidly, along with the rise in farm prices. The parity price is based on the relative purchasing power of the dollar received for farm products in buying finished goods. The rising parity prices are still above the prices of the basic commodities, although the gap has been narrowed.

Increase in Food Costs.

In the matter of food costs, the Bureau of Labor Statistics index showed increases above the level of a year ago of 70 per cent for lard, 44 per cent for butter, 34 per cent for pork, 18 per cent for mutton, 23 per cent for eggs, 5 per cent for bread and 4.5 per cent for milk. Vegetables have increased in some classes as much as 22 per cent.

Further increases in meat costs during 1935 were predicted from the estimate of livestock on farms on Jan. 1 showing decreases of 11 per cent in cattle, 35 per cent in hogs and 5 per cent in sheep compared with Jan. 1, 1934.

Meanwhile, the farm value of all three had increased to the point of compensating for reduced numbers, total values in all three cases being higher than a year ago.

Among the basic farm commodities that have passed the pre-war price level are wheat, cotton, corn, hogs, tobacco, sugar, peanuts, rye, flax, barley, grain sorghums, cattle, rice and milk.

Decrease in Farm Taxes.

An assertion that farm taxes already have been "substantially" decreased and that their upward trend apparently has been halted was made today by Gov. W. I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration.

Declaring that in many instances the total of interest and tax charges at present is less than tax charges alone in 1929, he added:

"The index of farm taxes which in 1931 was 238 per cent of the 1913 level, had declined to 189 in 1932, to 160 in 1933 and it is expected that the figures for 1934 and 1935 will be still lower with the full force of recent tax relief legislation" not yet felt.

Myers also reported "progress" in real estate tax relief" in a lowering of average farm real estate taxes from 58 cents per acre to 39 cents since 1929.

This decrease, he said, resulted partly from decreased costs of local government but was primarily because of equalization of the tax burden with a shift to larger taxing units and to sales taxes.

$28,334 FOR SALVATION ARMY

Second Report on Campaign to Raise $107,300.

Pledges totaling $28,334 have been made in the Salvation Army Service Fund Campaign for $107,300, it was announced at the second report meeting held by workers at Hotel Statler yesterday. Of the total, $9227 had been pledged since the first report meeting Wednesday.

The campaign began Monday night and will continue to Feb. 25.

No Gold Decision Before Monday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The Supreme Court's adjournment yesterday until noon Monday dispelled the probability of a "gold clause" ruling today. The Justices met for their usual Saturday consultation on cases argued before them recently. Should today end without an announcement that there will be no gold decision Monday, that fact might be interpreted as an indication that there would be an opinion Monday. Most observers believe the decision will not be announced before March 4, when the Court will convene after a two-week recess.

ALIENIST BLOCKED IN TESTIMONY AT KENNAMER TRIAL

State's Objections Prevents Reply as to Opinion on Whether Defendant Is Insane.

By the Associated Press.

PAWNEE, Ok., Feb. 16.—Dr. Karl A. Menninger, Topeka (Kan.) psychiatrist, was not permitted today to testify he believed Phil Kennamer was insane when he killed John F. Gorrell Jr. last Thanksgiving night in Tulsa. Court adjourned for the week-end at 1:15 p. m.

There was no testimony from about 10 o'clock until the afternoon session at 1 p. m. as attorneys and Judge Thurman Hurst conferred after the State objected to a 40-minute involved question which A. Flint Moss, chief defense counsel, put to Dr. Menninger. It concerned the mental state of Kennamer, 19 years old, son of a Federal Judge, who admits killing Gorrell, 23, but said it was in self-defense and to thwart an extortion plot against the family of Homer F. Wilcox, whose daughter, Virginia, 19, Kennamer said he loved.

The State insisted the question should include the fact Kennamer was under the influence of liquor at the time of many of his allegedly irrational actions.

Judge Thurman Hurst reserved his decision on the question over the week-end. Young Kennamer, at his own insistence, is expected to testify Monday.

Young Kennamer, who will take the stand Monday, admits the killing but asserts it was in self-defense and in an effort to thwart an extortion plot he asserted the 23-year-old dental student had planned against the family of Homer F. Wilcox, wealthy oil man.

State Halts Testimony.

Moss, at the end of the long questioning in which he related young Kennamer's history, his escapades and his unrequited love for Miss Virginia Wilcox, said to Dr. Menninger:

"Taking these facts into consideration in addition to your own information, would you say the defedant was rational or irrational?"

J. Berry King, former Attorney-General of Oklahoma, immediately objected there was much in the hypothetical question which should be stricken and other things, such as Kennamer's drinking, that should be included. A recess was ordered for transcription and analysis of the question.

Qualification of Menninger as an expert witness previously had brought a State objection to "a lecture." Moss called the objection by King "a cheap piece of grandstanding," but apologized when reprimanded by Judge Thurman Hurst.

Menninger had told of liaison work between the American Medical Association's group of psychiatrists and the American Bar Association regarding the handling of criminals with pronounced mental disorders.

Former Judge Testifies.

When the trial reconvened this afternoon, former Justice Charles W. Mason of the Oklahoma Supreme Court was called as a witness. Mason related how young Kennamer remarked of his sixteenth floor office, "this would be a fine place to commit suicide—just jump out head first," and "told me, too, he wanted to start out as editor of a Tulsa or Oklahoma City paper, not as a reporter."

After Mason had helped him to obtain a job on an Oklahoma City newspaper as a reporter, where he remained about two weeks, Mason said the boy expressed a desire to fly an airplane in a Central American revolution.

Yesterday's Proceedings.

Counsel for the defendant began developing the insanity contention yesterday in testimony by several witnesses, including his father, Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer, who wept while relating the morbid moods and fantastic impulses of his son.

Judge Kennamer, stern of manner on the bench in his own courtrooms, told of his difficulties with his son. His story was that he and the others of the family had tried for years without success to train young Kennamer into normal boyhood and manhood. He would not go to school. He wanted always to be head of the procession, to go to far places and have exciting adventures. He read greedily all kinds of books, some good, some not so good in subject matter and content, the jurist testified. Often the took jobs his father obtained for him, and quit them quickly because he could not reach the top in one step.

Mrs. O. L. Harmon, Tulsa, State witness who refused to testify, was released from jail late yesterday on $1000 bond. She had been held since Wednesday afternoon, when she unexpectedly cried out on the witness stand that she had "been threatened with death." The State charged her with contempt of court. She will be given a hearing when the Kennamer trial ends.

Health Champion Baby Dies.

EX-CONVICT FINED $500 IN DEATH OF MECHANIC

Peter Kennedy Convicted of Manslaughter; Victim Dies of Fight Injuries.

Peter Kennedy, 34-year-old former convict, 1441 North Twenty-second street, was found guilty of manslaughter and fined $500 by a jury in Circuit Judge Williams' court yesterday for the death of Frank J. Hellmich, 44-year-old mechanic, who died from injuries suffered when he was beaten and knocked down by Kennedy last Aug. 9 during an argument over an inconsequential automobile accident.

Counsel for Kennedy filed a motion for a new trial and he was released on bond.

The collision occurred at Cass avenue and Twenty-third street, when automobiles operated by Kennedy and Hellmich, scraped fenders as they stopped for the intersection. Hellmich drove across the intersection and then went back to see if any damage had been caused to Kennedy's car, witnesses testified.

Kennedy did not take the stand but witnesses testified Hellmich tried to strike Kennedy, who knocked Hellmich down.

Mrs. Hellmich, who had been riding with her husband, testified she did not see the beginning of the fight, but when she got out of the car, her husband was just getting up from the street and Kennedy seized him by the shoulders, throwing him back. His head struck the pavement and he died of a fractured skull shortly after he was taken to City Hospital.

Hellmich, a short, slender man, lived at 3649 Garfield avenue. Kennedy, who is tall and heavy set, served 18 months in a Federal penitentiary about 10 years ago on a narcotic charge.

$50,000 FOR RIVERFRONT MEMORIAL PLANNING FUND

Jefferson - National Association Seeks Total of $250,000 to Pay Expenses.

Subscriptions og $50,031 toward a fund of $250,000 for expenses of the United States Territorial Expansion Memorial Commission in planning a river-front memorial here to Thomas Jefferson and the developmest of the West were announced at a luncheon of the Jefferson-National Expansion Memorial Association at the Missouri Athletic Association yesterday.

Roscoe C. Hobbs, with a quota of $1000 sought from the railroad tie industry, reported raising $1320. The fourth degree assembly of the Knights of Columbus, the Typographical Union and Claude B. Ricketts, manager of Railway Exchange Building, were cited as the first subscribers in their respective fields.

The next report in the campaign will be made at luncheon at the same place Wednesday.

FRAZIER-LEMKE LAW APPEAL ARRIVES IN SUPREME COURT

Farm Mortgage Moratorium's Constitutionality Challenged by Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — The Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium law amendment to the National Bankruptcy Act was carried to the Supreme Court today for a decision on its constitutionality.

The Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank raised the issue by filing an appeal from the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati, which last week upheld the law. Judge Charles J. Dawson, in United States District Court at Louisville, had previously declared the law to be constitutional, although he said he deemed it unwise.

FLEEING MURDERER KILLED BY OWN PISTOL

Stumbles and Shoots Self in Head—Had Wounded Three Persons Also.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Feb. 16.—A crazed farmer who set out with a pistol to even old scores left a trail of dead and wounded victims in three Michigan towns early today, killing one man and wounding his two children and another woman before he was killed, apparently by his own bullet, in Detroit.

The dead: Archie Hofhanesian, 60 years old, the killer, and Abraham Arakelian, 48, Dearborn baker.

The wounded: Mrs. Arakelian, 45; Sophia Hofhanesian, 15, and John Hofhanesian, 10.

The madman shot and gravely wounded his son and daughter at a farmhouse near the village of Pinckney. Invading Arakelian's bakery, in Dearborn, he killed Arakelian and wounded his wife. He was seeking to enter the home of another daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Kalousian, 17, of Detroit, when a policeman's bullet stopped him. As he fell, his own pistol was discharged and the bullet struck him in the head.

According to the story pieced together by Detroit police and authorities of Livingston County, where the first shootings occurred, Hofhanesian started out from Detroit about 11 o'clock last night.

He hired a taxi driver to take him to Pinckney.

While the unsuspecting driver waited, Hofhanesian awakened his six children, who had not seen him since he quarreled with their mother and left for Chicago nine months ago.

"Where's your mother," he asked. Sophia told him she was in Dearborn. "This is your last night on earth," he shouted angrily and began firing at them. One bullet struck Sophia in the head. Another pierced John's arm and entered his side.

Hofhanesian, his pistol empty, fled in the cab to Arakelian's Dearborn bakery. Mrs. Hofhanesian was in an upstairs room. Without a word he opened fire on Arakelian and his wife.

Again he fled, this time on foot. Warned, police awaited his arrival at the daughter's home.

Hofhanesian's older son, Andrew, 23, who was in the Dearborn bakery with his mother when the shooting occurred there, said once before his father had tried to kill them.

Store Burglars Get $300 in Loot.

Police were notified yesterday that burglars broke into the C. E. Williams Shoe Co., 600 Franklin avenue, Thursday night, and stole $300 worth of hosiery and garters. The burglars climbed a fire escape to the roof of the four-story Home Hotel, 823 North Sixth street, and slid down a rope to the roof of the three-story shoe company building, gaining entrance through a trap door.

MAN KILLED BY AUTO IN W. FLORISSANT AV.

John J. Barry Struck in Front of Ruskin Avenue Police Station Garage.

John J. Barry, 5455 Ruskin avenue, was killed by an automobile in the 5000 block of West Florissant avenue last night.

He alighted from a street car at 7 o'clock and was crossing the street in front of the Ruskin Avenue Police Station garage when run down by an automobile driven by George H. Murmann, a chauffeur, 5755 Riverview boulevard. He was pronounced dead of a fractured skull at City Hospital. Murmann told police he did not see Barry until too late to avoid the accident.

Barry, 54 years old, was employed in the distribution department of the Laclede Gas Light Co. His wife and six children survive.

There have been 28 motor vehicle fatalities in the city since Jan. 1, as compared with 20 at this time last year.

Six Injured in Head-On Collision on Grand Boulevard Viaduct.

Six persons were hurt in a head-on collision of two automobiles on the Grand boulevard viaduct at 2 o'clock this morning.

One machine was occupied by Dr. Charles G. Brosch, 32, a dentist, 3517A Hartford street, who suffered a skull injury; Virgil Cadwell, 33, a clerk, 2405 North Vandeventer avenue, skull injury; Miss Ann Vosivich, 23-year-old waitress, 2310 South Thirteenth street, skull injury, and Miss Dolores Gildehaus, 23, 4435 Neosho street, who is in Desloge Hospital with fractures of the neck and jaw and a skull injury.

Four Negroes were in the other car. Clarence Williby, 36, the driver, 1418 North Garrison avenue, was cut and bruised. Mrs. Ida Belle Lucas, 19, 2942 Thomas street, suffered a broken leg. When police reached the scene the car occupied by the white persons was on the wrong side of the street. Dr. Brosch was behind the steering wheel, but denied being the driver, police said.

Three persons were hurt in a collision between their automobile and a Public Service Co. bus at Vandeventer avenue and Shaw boulevard last night. Roy Hanson, 22, a chemist, the driver, suffered cuts of the face and scalp. Mrs. Marie Hansen, 28, suffered a skull injury and fractured ribs. Carl Hansen Jr., 9, suffered a broken nose. All reside at 1735 South Eighteenth street. The bus was operated by Clarence Heckel, 1616 Hickory street.

BILLS WOULD ELIMINATE COUNTY ROAD OVERSEER

At Same Time, Sponsor Says, They Will Cut Cost and Improve Efficiency of Road Maintenance.

Bills sponsored by Highway Engineer Crutsinger of St. Louis County, with the intention of reducing the cost and increasing the efficiency of road maintenance, have been introduced in the Legislature by Representative Russell. They would eliminate the force of 38 district road overseers appointed by the County Court under a system of many years' standing.

The Highway Engineer would have authority under the bills to employ maintenance laborers and supervisors with the approval of the court. The volume of employment would not be decreased by the change, but administration of the work would be improved, Crutsinger declared, asserting that the overseers were not equipped for maintenance of the improved system of roads. Their chief equipment has been some old-type scraper blades, but the county has only 34 miles of dirt roads left, outside of subdivisions.

In 1932 the overseers and their employes cost the county $142,221. The next year, when Crutsinger took office, he eliminated much of their work, reducing the bill to $64,976. Last year the cost was $26,187 and last month only $800. The overseers receive $5 a day.

GIRL'S STOMACH UPSIDE DOWN

Omaha Child, 10, Victim of Unusual Muscular Injury.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 16. — Alyce Jane McHenry, 10 years old, victim of an unusual muscular injury which has turned her stomach upside down, is going to Fall River, Mass., for an operation. The trip, on which Alyce Jane will be accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Louella McHenry, was made possible by an Omaha business man and his wife, parents of six children.

The child's ailment is a hernia of the diaphragm, the muscle between the chest and abdominal cavities. The suction engendered by breathing has drawn the stomach into the thorax, causing danger of strangulation.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Points About 30-Hour Week.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOU say that "if industry were put on a 30-hour week, prices would rise," and "if industry in its present condition attempted to absorb the labor costs entailed by the 30-hour week, it would, in many instances, face bankruptcy." Your contention is that the cost of labor would cause prices to rise and counteract the increase in purchasing power so that no advantage would be gained by the worker. This might be true if labor made up the entire cost of production. However, the cost of labor is only one factor. Production cost is made up of such expenses as rent, interest, insurance, salaries of entrepreneurs and officials, upkeep, reasonable profit (unreasonable in some cases), etc.

For example, the wages of labor might make up only 10 per cent of production cost. Suppose the laborer is paid $10 a week. He produces $100 worth of goods in that week. Double his salary, giving him $20 a week. If this additional expense is added to the price of the articles he produces, the price of his week's production will be only $110 instead of $100. This is an increase of only 10 per cent of the original selling price, but remember that the laborer's purchasing power has been increased 100 per cent. Certainly this is a decided increase in purchasing power for the laborer.

You protest that "our productive plant is not too large to supply the reasonable wants of our citizens." Certainly we have no quarrel there, but what has this to do with the 30-hour week? There is no intention of cutting down production, and no reason why it should be reduced. One great purpose of the bill is to employ more workers. If the work week is shortened for each individual worker, more workers will be employed to produce the necessary amount of goods. Production would probably be actually increased, because everyone knows that we have not been producing at anything like maximum capacity because of lack of ability to buy. To be sure, our production plant is not too large, but for the past few years unemployment and lack of purchasing power have been so prevalent that we have not been able to use these products. Put our laborers to work and increase their purchasing power so that they will have the ability to "supply the reasonable wants of our citizens." If they furnish a market, the producers will supply it.

Our problem is one of distribution, not of production. A STUDENT.

Shaw's Garden Deficit.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WE have in St. Louis the Missouri Botanical Garden—Shaw's Garden—that is now, and has been for many years, an outstanding attraction, not only for ourselves but for the world at large.

As I understand it, the garden was founded by Henry Shaw and maintained by him throughout his life, and since his death the trustees of the estate have endeavored to follow in his footsteps, but through force of circumstances and because of no fault of theirs, they have failed to do so. As a result, there is a deficit of some $60,000 or more, and with no immediate prospect of overcoming it. It seems to me an institution of the Henry Shaw kind, that has done so much for St. Louis without any assistance whatsoever from the city, is deserving of a better fate than a seemingly hopeless drift.

What have our city fathers to say about it? CIVIC PRIDE.

Notes on Women.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE back-to-the-home movement is one of several practical ones needed to balance the family budgets in the nation. Millions of girls and women and thousands of boys have taken men's jobs since the war started, thus crowding men out of industry. Business keeps hiring more women and youngsters and using more wasteful labor-saving machines yearly.

It is nature's way that women give birth to the young and nurse them, care for them and the home. Outside of America, women are not looked up to. Europeans continually say American men worship women. The Puritan fathers picked out good women and with them built up a fine quality of womanhood in America and they became proud of them. Their sons became famous for chivalry, courage, lack of folly, for learning and oratory. The Pilgrim fathers set the examples in American culture through their educational leadership in the first American universities.

In the early days, practically all teaching, clerking, etc., was done by men. Women baked, sewed and raised gardens; they did not go in for careers. Men are far better teachers than women because they are so much more practical. They are better clerks and excel in stenography when trained. You seldom find women cooking in logging camps or in construction camps, hotels or restaurants, then only when there is a small number to cook for, simply because women cannot cook for large numbers.

Great Athens floundered also from waste, excessive profits and the public extravagance of women. Solon regulated laws, habits, profits and women's dress, and prosperity returned. Extravagant whims of women sank Rome.

THE SALES TAX AGAIN.

The Post-Dispatch does not like the principle of the sales tax and never has liked it. It has consistently opposed the imposition of a sales tax by the Federal Government. It believes and has stated that the sales tax is in effect an "upside-down income tax." It believes that the sales tax should have no permanent place in either the Federal tax system or that of the State Government.

With respect to State revenues, however, the Post-Dispatch is convinced that some concession has got to be made to the exigencies of the times. The State must raise money for urgent relief needs. This is undisputed. Where is this money to be obtained? It cannot be had from an increase in the property tax. Property is already bearing an intolerable burden. An increase in the State income tax would take the State still further into a field to which the Federal Government has a prior claim and which may be tilled again by that Government. We do not believe a movement to increase the State income tax at this time could or should succeed. There remains, then, only the sales tax as the source from which the State may hope to derive the money that the Federal Government has said must be contributed by the State if it is to continue to receive Federal funds for relief.

Gov. Park, in his message at the opening of the Legislature, advocated doubling the present ½ of 1 per cent sales tax. In arguing for this proposed increase, the Governor said that retail business in Missouri had improved materially over the previous year. He pointed out, further, that the great bulk of Government money expended for relief goes directly or indirectly to the merchants. He took issue with the contention of the merchants that the sales tax cannot be passed on to the consumer.

The merchants of the State have just entered an impressive protest against an increase in the sales tax. They make out a persuasive case. They assert that the present tax has caused hardship to small merchants, particularly in the small towns and the country, and that an increase would drive many merchants to the wall. They say that many articles are sold at a price fixed by the manufacturer and that it is impossible in these cases to pass on the tax to the consumer. They say that a sales tax would impede economic recovery. They say, moreover, and this is very much to the point, that only about 65 per cent of those subject to the tax are paying it, and that if the law were fully enforced, it would yield enough revenue to obviate any necessity of an increase in the rate.

We believe that this last contention of the merchants is open to question, but there can be no question that adequate enforcement of the law would materially increase the revenues from it.

As a result of the representations of the protesting merchants and other business interests, it is the present intention at Jefferson City to lay aside all the pending sales tax bills, including the Governor's, and to substitute therefor a bill to be drawn by a subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee. It is understood that this subcommittee will propose a tax levy of less than 1 per cent, but on a broader base than that fixed in the present law.

The Post-Dispatch holds no brief for any particular sales tax rate. It does believe, however, that full consideration should be given to the possibility of increasing the revenues through complete enforcement of the law. It believes the rate should be fixed at a figure no higher than that absolutely required to meet the relief needs of the State. It believes that this figure need not exceed the Governor's recommendation of 1 per cent, and that if the evidence shows that a lower rate, with complete enforcement and a broadened base, will produce enough money for relief, that lower rate should be adopted. It believes that a sales tax, in whatever form levied and at whatever rate, should be plainly designated as an emergency measure, to be done away with as soon as feasible.

These are the principles which should guide the subcommittee in the important and difficult task to which it has been assigned.

US AND THE HIGHBROWS.

We enjoy reading the charmingly naive comments of the highbrow critics on the types of entertainment that appeal to the multitude. Long after Ring Lardner, Krazy Kat, Charlie Chaplin and Mickey Mouse had been taken to the hearts of millions of people, the highbrow critics made the remarkable discovery that they represented ART.

However, we started out to call attention to a clash of highbrow opinion about a scene from the movie "Cavalcade." Stark Young, writing in the New Republic, says: "Such moments in 'Cavalcade' as that where the doomed young people stand aside and you see on the lifebelt the word 'Titanic,' I thought the cheapest theater rubbish." That made us blush for our inferiority, for that was one of the scenes we deemed especially impressive. Gilbert Seldes, whose brow is just as high as Stark Young's, now comes to our rescue. In Scribner's, he is discussing the result of a poll he took of the memorable scenes in various movies. He found that, of "Cavalcade," the thing that was remembered was "the moment when the lifebelt, before which the lovers have sworn eternal fidelity, is seen to bear the name of the Titanic."

That is pretty gratifying. Still, we have about decided to leave the highbrow critics to their disputation, while we sit back, chew our gum and give ourselves over to unintellectual entertainment, wherever we can find it.

REFUGEES FROM THE SAAR.

"Homeless, jobless and mostly penniless, 3000 Saarlanders, refugees all, are camping in French towns." Thus begins an Associated Press dispatch from Paris describing the desperate plight of the latest German refugee group. These people are fugitives from their homeland merely because they shunned expediency and lived up to their convictions by opposing the Saar's reunion with Germany. Despite Germany's guarantee of protection for these persons, the Saar Nazis persecute and threaten them without restraint. A correspondent of the Manchester Guardian describes a systematic campaign of intimidation, with threats of dire vengeance after March 1, when the territory passes to Germany.

The influx of refugees, which is expected to increase next month, is straining the resources of France's hospitality, and that country has appealed to the League for aid. Excluding Saarlanders, it is estimated that the Nazi terror has expelled 77,000 persons in all. Of these, it was reported a few days ago by the League's committee on refugees, 25,000 are still unabsorbed. The dictates of human decency have moved citizens of other countries to aid these miserable refugees with shelter and funds as far as possible, but all have their own destitute to care for. The plight of these people, including many children and aged persons wholly innocent of any offense, is one of the harshest condemnations that can be raised against Germany's Fascist regime.

SYMPHONY AND AUDITORIUM.

It has become apparent by this time that the new Auditorium has greatly aided the growth of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. Since the orchestra moved into this spacious municipal building, where the audiences are comfortable and there is abundant room, subscriptions have increased 45 per cent and the single seat sale 85 per cent.

It is something which should gratify all those who have believed in the future of the orchestra, as well as justify the faith of those who have foreseen that the Auditorium has community uses quite aside from its earning capacity or its merely utilitarian objectives. The Symphony Orchestra's growth has been arrested for years by the absence of a modern fireproof auditorium, one big enough for all who might come, one equipped with modern facilities. Not even the skill of Conductor Golschmann, which gave the orchestra added impetus before it left the Odeon, could have done for it what the Auditorium has done.

St. Louis could have done worse than to have built the Auditorium for the Symphony. This most persistent of our cultural influences, an institution which has held on through thick and thin for more than half a century, is far more precious in its civilizing influences than most of the material uses to which the Auditorium can be put. The orchestra will grow there. Its audiences will grow. The prestige of the Auditorium will grow because of them. The orchestra cannot be, even in the Auditorium, a self-sustaining enterprise. It is too richly manned, too loftily conceived, not to require always a degree of philanthropic support.

Nevertheless, the orchestra carries its own growth germs. The proof is that when it moved into the Auditorium, it began to grow like a green bay tree. Its pension concert for retired musicians last Sunday afternoon was such an event as St. Louis has seldom known. It was a Stravinsky program. Stravinsky himself led the orchestra. One of the most dynamic figures in the history of music, a man who is putting a profound impress upon our time, the little Russian composer interpreted for us his own work. It was inspiring to audience and orchestra alike. It was what a music criticism in the Post-Dispatch said it was: "An unmistakable event of the first importance." Walt Whitman said great poets need great audiences. So do orchestras need auditoriums. Of all the ornate things done on the Plaza, the Auditorium is immeasurably the greatest because of what it has done for the Symphony Orchestra.

Cabinet members are to be allowed $2500 automobiles. Strap-hanging economy, eh?

THE GOVERNMENT AS MORTGAGE HOLDER.

The open-handedness of the Government in trying to save citizens from distress has brought many new problems. Among them is that of convincing borrowers that they are under a real obligation to repay funds advanced by Government agencies to save their homes from foreclosure.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation, dispenser of Government funds to extend and ease home mortgages, has filed 58 foreclosure suits to protect its loans, but it states that in only 10 cases, a comparatively small number, indeed, had the borrowers deliberately failed or refused to pay their notes.

It appears, however, from a statement issued by John H. Fahey, chairman of HOLC, that some borrowers are inclined to look lightly on their obligations to the Government, and even to take it for granted that a generous Uncle Sam, handing out cash in every direction, does not even expect to be repaid. Said Mr. Fahey:

> It is to be regretted that an irresponsible element has spread the impression that this corporation does not insist upon collection of payments due. Any such suggestion implies that swindlers and deliberate defaulters are entitled to encouragement in their bad faith at the cost of the entire public, which this corporation represents.
>
> I am glad to say that only a small number of people are so far threatened with the loss of their homes in foreclosure by following such misleading advice. The number is bound to increase, however, if more of our borrowers are deluded into neglecting their promissory obligations which unquestionably they are able to meet.

It is probably inevitable that a good many persons, having been aided in holding their homes by public funds, will turn on their benefactor and regard the Government as a stony-hearted oppressor for insisting on payment of what is due it.

The Dionnes, pere and mere, are probably convinced that their quintet is a ten-strike.

THE SUPREME COURT ON THE MOONEY CASE.

The Supreme Court's decision this week against reconsidering its recent refusal to review the Mooney case is in line with its established practice. In announcing its conviction that it should not review the case, the court last December went to great pains to state its reasons, whereas ordinarily it dismisses applications for review with no more than a mere announcement. Not only that, but Chief Justice Hughes took it upon himself to write and read the conclusion of the court, the gist of which was that the remedy at present should be had from the courts of California. Here is the language of the Chief Justice:

> No decision of the Supreme Court of California has been brought to our attention holding that the State court is without the power to issue this historical remedial process (the prerogative of habeas corpus) when it appears that one is deprived of his liberty without due process of law in violation of the Constitution of the United States. Upon the State courts equally with the courts of the Union, rests the obligation to guard and enforce every right secured by that Constitution.

This should make it clear that the United States Supreme Court did not in any wise pass on the guilt or innocence of the man in San Quentin penitentiary. Neither did it say that he did or did not have a fair trial. What the Supreme Court declared was that since, in its opinion, the petitioner's rights had not been exhausted in the California courts, it was not the duty of the Supreme Court to review this case. Granting the assumption of the Supreme Court, its reasoning is sound constitutional logic.

The perfect combination is safety glass and sane driving.

ONE TRICK HE FORGOT TO DISCARD.

—From the Cleveland Press.

Who Shall Pay for Job Insurance?

Weighing question of whether workers should contribute to unemployment insurance funds, economist finds margin of preference for their paying about 1 per cent; says this will increase funds, facilitate administration and bolster morale; thinks Federal Government should participate with grants and in co-ordinating state action.

From an Address by E. P. Hohman, Associate Professor of Economics, Northwestern University, Before Retail Merchants' Committee, Chicago.

THE so-called four-way plan of unemployment insurance contemplates participation by employers, employes, the state and the Federal Government. By general consent, it is assumed that at least two of these bodies, employers and the state, should and must be involved in virtually any conceivable compulsory plan. The question here is not whether they should be included, and how and to what extent. The issue with regard to employes and the Federal Government, however, is not so clear, and merits thoughtful consideration.

The employe is and obviously must be drawn in as a beneficiary; but should he be a contributor as well? No, says one body of opinion, including organized labor, because it is illogical to tax the very persons you are trying to help; because workers are not responsible for unemployment and, more important, are in no position to determine policies for curtailing it; because a subtraction of even 1 per cent from the contents of the pay envelope will represent real hardship to many persons whose earnings are already tragically low; and because it will complicate the administrative machinery of the law.

Yes, replies another school of thought, for the additional income to the insurance fund will make possible either larger benefits or benefits payable over a longer period, or both, and thus more than compensate workers as a whole for the sacrifices involved in the payment of premiums; the status of contributors will give employes the unquestioned right to be represented on advisory and policy-determining boards, and will thus facilitate efficient administration by providing a ready means for the presentation of grievances and the settling of disputes; and the psychological effect on morale and self-respect will be good, since there need be no implication of charity about the benefit.

On balance, there would seem to be in these opposing points of view a fair margin of preference for a contribution of about 1 per cent from the employes. Even the argument that the entire burden should be placed upon the employer as a means of providing this strategic person with an adequate incentive for regularizing work loses much of its force when we realize that a given contribution of say 3 per cent would furnish an employer just as strong an incentive if his employes were giving another 1 per cent as if they were not.

But what about the role of the Federal Government? A direct National Unemployment Insurance Act, taking the matter out of the hands of the states, seems quite unlikely and might well be declared unconstitutional; but current proposals call for utilizing the Federal Government as a means of stimulating, guiding and co-ordinating the various hoped-for state laws.

Under such a scheme, Congress would impose a Federal tax on payrolls, with provision for a rebate against this tax for all employers who were contributing to a state fund, and for Federal grants-in-aid for unemployment compensation, under stipulated conditions, to states which did not have their own laws. Rebates would be allowed, however, only in cases where the state laws measured up to certain minimum standards laid down by the Secretary of Labor. Beyond this minimum level, the state legislatures might enact any type of law which seemed desirable; but the national Government would assume responsibility for general administrative guidance and supervision and for the safeguarding and investment of all unemployment reserves.

This type of legislation is subject to some doubt as to constitutionality, although the principle of grants-in-aid is less likely to run afoul of constitutional limitations than the major concept of the Wagner-Lewis bill, which employed the taxing power of Congress more bluntly for the purpose of persuading the states to pass their own legislation. It is also open to the charge of leading us away from states' rights and accentuating the tendency toward Federal centralization and bureaucracy.

On the other hand, it possesses several distinct advantages. By setting uniform minimum requirements, it will aid materially in dealing with the vexing problem of interstate competition, and will simplify the administrative procedure in dealing with insured persons who migrate from one state to another. It will undoubtedly encourage the rapid spread of state laws, and so hasten and broaden the gains to be derived from stabilized purchasing power, improved labor morale, the curtailment of abject poverty and the increased pressure to regularize employment. It will enable us to employ national measures and machinery in dealing with what is admittedly and obviously a nation-wide problem, far transcending the boundaries of any single state.

At the same time, the flexibility of procedure and allowance for varying local conditions which are absolute essentials of successful administration can be maintained by allowing the states to retain control of the actual administrative machinery. And finally, it is becoming more and more clear that the national Government is the only agency whose jurisdiction is wide enough and whose powers are great enough to deal with certain fundamental problems of unemployment prevention, on the one hand, and of unemployment relief, on the other, which are almost certain to be with us for some time to come.

If it is to handle its heavy responsibilities in connection with these twin problems adequately, it must have some voice in helping to determine the major outlines of unemployment insurance, the first line of defense against the unemployment attacks of the future.

COMMENT ON CODE REFORM.

From the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

THE Missouri Bar Association is reported to be backing a program for reform of the State's criminal practice laws, now before the Legislature—which probably is dominated by lawyers. Missouri laymen wise in their generation probably will refrain from celebration of the reform until the lawyer-legislators decide whether they want what their bar association recommends.

Norris vs. Farley

From the Pittsburgh Press.

ANNOUNCEMENT that Postmaster-General Farley will continue as chairman of the Democratic National Committee through the 1936 presidential campaign comes as no surprise.

Almost a year has elapsed since Mr. Farley promised—with the White House echoing his promise—to give up his party positions and devote his full time to the postal service. But since then, apparently with White House consent, Mr. Farley has had himself re-elected chairman of the New York State Democratic Committee.

When the administration started, amid general applause, its crusade to separate partisan politics from the Government service, it succeeded in weeding out some of the lesser political personalities. But Mr. Farley's tenacious hold on three jobs long ago caused the public to write off the administration promises.

* * *

All of this emphasizes the need for congressional action on Senator Norris' bill to purge the postal service of political domination. The Nebraska Senator cannot be charged with any desire to embarrass the administration. He is a pro-Roosevelt progressive, and is trying to save the administration from party spoilsmen. Moreover, as a characteristic of this hard-headed idealist, he is trying to effect a reform which will endure through future administrations.

The Postoffice Department is the Government's largest and oldest business institution. Yet, from the time of Benjamin Franklin as Postmaster-General, the department has continued a deficit-ridden political pie counter. Senator Norris' bill would end this spoils tradition, and permit the department to function in the future on a strictly business basis.

The bill provides a 10-year appointment for the Postmaster-General and directs him to select his subordinates on merit, without regard to the wishes of party leaders or Congressmen. It forbids all postal employes, including the Postmaster-General, to participate in party politics. Like a similar bill introduced by Senator Vandenberg, it would establish a "career service" in the Postoffice Department, and encourage promotion from the ranks.

If such a bill were to become law, Mr. Farley might resign his Government job rather than desert his first love, the party. But that would hardly prove an irreparable injury to the postal service.

FEDERAL COURT ON BEARDS.

From the Docket.

IN this day when the Constitution is being so thoroughly reconstructed, it is a relief, at least for the male part of the population, to find that a Federal court in no uncertain terms upholds the fundamental right of men to wear beards.

In the case of Israelite House of David vs. Murphy (D. C.) 6 F. Supp. 914, the bearded baseball team of Michigan sought to enjoin defendant's baseball team on the ground that defendant's team was also equipped with like beards. In holding that that alone would be insufficient ground for an injunction, the court said: "From time immemorial . . . beards have been in the public domain. In respect of matters within that domain, all men have rights in common. Any man, therefore, if so minded, may—without being subject to any challenge, legal or equitable—not only grow such beard as he can, but purposely imitate another's facial shrubbery—even to the extent of following such topiary modification thereof as may have caught his fancy."

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.

DESPITE the "purging" of the AAA, the fight between consumers and the big food middlemen is right back where it started. In fact, one week after Henry Wallace had cleaned out his "radicals" he had exactly the same deadlock on his hands regarding the price of milk in New England. Calvin Hoover, new appointee as head of the Consumers' Counsel, took the same stand as his demoted predecessor—that New England milk distributers were gouging the public, boosting prices unnecessarily. . . . Naval Secretary Claude Augustus Swanson is wearing a long face these days. The idea that some of his Admirals were in collusion with the shipbuilding companies on cruiser contracts makes him so irritable that subordinates hardly can go near him. . . . Passing Democrat Jack Garner in the cloak room the other day, Republican Jim Couzens clapped the Senate's presiding officer on the back and said: "Hello, Boss!"

Busy Bee.

TO HER radio broadcasting and magazine writing, Mrs. Roosevelt is adding still another income-producing enterprise. She has signed with a newspaper syndicate to do a series of articles on historic American figures. . . . Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Congresswoman from New Jersey, has introduced a bill to award a gold medal to Senator A. Harry Moore and the officers and crew of the fishing sloop "Paramount" for their "part in rescuing 67 passengers of the ill-fated Morro Castle." Moore's part consisted of flying over the burning ship in an airplane. . . . Maine's Senator Freddy Hale had an embarrassing experience at a recent White House reception. Waiting in line to greet the President, Freddy put his hands in his pockets. He was spotted in this position by Personal Bodyguard Gus Gennerich, who rushed up and began to frisk him. It is a standing White House rule that those approaching the President must have their hands showing.

The fight within the New York Stock Exchange to supplant Morgan-affiliated Richard Whitney as head of the institution is getting hot and lively. Theodore S. Watson, head of the prominent brokerage firm of Watson & White, startled Wall Street by openly demanding a house-cleaning. . . . The NRA is scratching its head on how to obtain a representative group of little business men to appear at its forthcoming public hearings. Blue Eagle rulers find that small business men have plenty of complaints but lack the money to come to Washington to present them. . . . Inner administration advisers say privately that Roosevelt will allocate approximately $600,000,000 of the $4,800,000,000 work-relief fund for low-cost housing construction.

Anti-Green.

THE movement among A. F. of L. leaders to elect a new and more progressive president in place of plodding Bill Green is making considerable headway. At the recent meeting of the A. F. of L. executive committee a large majority fo the labor chieftains privately indicated dissatisfaction with Green's rule. The big obstacle in the way to supplanting him is the fact that so many of his leading opponents would like to succeed him that they cannot get together on a candidate. . . . Representative Adolph J. Sabath, leader of patronage complainers, has circularized his Democratic colleagues with a letter asking them to send him information regarding the number of Republicans holding office in their districts, and "any other objectionable appointments" made since March 3, 1933. . . . Sidney Hillman, labor representative on the NRA board, is telling friends that he is planning to resign as soon as Congress has acted on the new NRA bill. If this takes too much time he may quit even before the legislation is adopted.

Women Lawyers.

WHEN Belva Lockwood was admitted to practice before the U. S. Supreme Court in 1879, it was a novel distinction for her sex. Now, however, approximately 25 women are admitted every year, out of a total of 750 to 800 lawyers. . . . West Virginia's fledgling Senator Rush Holt, who comes to the Senate every day despite the fact he cannot vote or speak, says: "I sometimes feel like a horse held back in a race when the others are running free. He paws the ground and wants to get into it with the others." . . . Next to Holt on the Senate floor sits Bilbo, the Mississippi wonder, whose silence is self-imposed. He has told friends he intends to keep his mouth shut "for the first year." If he does, it will be the first time in many years.

One-Man Rule.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has indicated to several conferees that he is leaning strongly to a return of one-man rule for the NRA if and when it receives its proposed two-year new lease of life. This has always been the view of Gen. Hugh Johnson, who tried to put the idea across when he resigned last summer. "Associate President" Richberg had the President's ear, however, and a seven-man board was inaugurated. Now Roosevelt seems to think that a board is not as efficient as a chief executive supported by a council of advisers. . . . Glenn Hudson, an actuary associated with Dr. Frank E. Townsend, admitted during cross-examination by members of the House Ways and Means Committee that he would not vote for the McGroarty bill—which embodies the Townsend old-age pension plan—if he were a member of Congress. . . . The House Claims Committee has approved a bill granting to a Federal prison inmate a pension of $45 a month for the rest of his life because he lost his hand in falling from a painter's scaffold. The bill was the subject of heated argument, which finally ended when one committeeman declared, "If this man was a pickpocket by trade, he has certainly lost his means of a livelihood and is entitled to a pension."

Statue.

WHEN Congresswoman Isabella Greenway leaves the House chamber to go visiting in the Senate wing of the Capitol, she passes the bronze statue of her late husband, near the door of Statuary Hall. Booted and spurred, in the outfit of a Rough Rider, John Campbell Greenway of Arizona makes a sharp contrast to the marble dignitaries who flank him on either side—Daniel Webster of New Hampshire and Samuel Adams of Massachusetts. Much commented on, the statue is the work of Gutzon Borglum. . . . When the ministers of the two warring countries, Paraguay and Bolivia, meet at diplomatic functions in Washington, they bow stiffly to one another but do not speak. . . . The mail of the AAA has changed in character; it is no longer preponderantly protest mail from farmers fighting regulation. . . . There has been a lot of futile standing in line in the Capitol these days. Thousands of people hoped to hear the Supreme Court decision on the gold clause, but the Chamber can accommodate only 94 spectators. This is exclusive of the space for lawyers, which is nearly twice as large.

ANGLO-FRENCH PARLEY ON REPLY TO GERMANY

Negotiations to Be Held Before New Note Is Sent on Security Pact.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Great Britain will conduct negotiations with France concerning the German reply to the security pact proposals through ordinary diplomatic channels before replying to Germany, it was stated authoritatively today.

This will be the next step in the general plan to safeguard European peace. It was said Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, would not need to go to Paris for conferences, but the nature of the British reply to Germany will depend on negotiating between Downing street and the Quai d'Orsay.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—Germany declared itself ready in principle last night to use air forces to preserve the peace of Western Europe, and invited Great Britain to inaugurate bilateral discussions to that end.

A note couched in broad terms—the Reich's reply to Anglo-French proposals for an inclusive European security agreement—declared this air agreement might be one step toward solution of other problems and promised to examine the question of how to avoid the danger of an armaments race.

Germany agrees with the British and the French Governments in desiring sincerely "to promote the safeguarding of peace" the note said, "the maintenance of which is in the interests of Germany's security as well as in the interests of the security of other European states."

The note avoided mentioning the proposed eastern and Danubian pacts, but a Foreign Office spokesman said Germany's reply followed the general tone of the Anglo-French communique which was most specific on the air proposals.

Declaring "the German Government welcomes the spirit of trustful discussion between the individual Governments," the note promised that the Reich would thoroughly examine "the whole document concerning the European questions contained in them."

PARAGUAYANS DRIVEN BACK TWICE BY THE BOLIVIANS

Attempt Apparently Being Made to Gain Control of Oil Fields Before League Meets.

By the Associated Press.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Feb. 16.—Paraguayans attempted twice yesterday to storm Villa Montes, Bolivian stronghold controlling the Chaco's rich oil fields. Bolivian reports said the Paraguayan advances had been repulsed.

There have been reports that Paraguay was bent on capturing Villa Montes before the League of Nations Assembly meets this month to consider additional sanctions if the fighting is not halted.

Newspapers here said a Bolivian patrol from Puerto Suarez entered Brazil and captured a Brazilian known for his violent anti-Bolivian sympathies.

ITALIAN TROOPS SAIL, PREPARED FOR WAR

First Contingent Leaves Naples on Way to Border of Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Feb. 16.—An official communique issued today said the first contingent of Italian troops embarked for Italy's African colonies this afternoon. One battalion of Black Shirts sailed from Naples, the announcement said, after being reviewed by Crown Prince Umberto.

The same communique announced that Premier Mussolini reviewed two other battalions previous to their departure. A battalion consists of about 700 men.

The Premier first made an address to the troops, after which they passed in review before him. They had full colonial equipment and Pith helmets. Mussolini received an ovation when he left the barracks.

Troops moved into Rome from northern points, preparatory to embarkation for Africa.

Reports that the first contingent had sailed did not ruffle Negradas Yesus, Ethiopian Charge d'Affaires, who declared: "We will defend our homes with our lives."

"If Italy comes against us," Yesus said, "her blood will be on her own head."

Hundreds of reservists continued to receive mobilization cards, telling them to hold themselves in readiness. A Government spokesman said this was an automatic procedure following first mobilization. Many unemployed mechanics, motor experts, electricians, road and bridge builders and railroad men also have been absorbed and sent south.

Premier Mussolini, in the face of a third note from Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, has not yet decided to state his program publicly.

Press reports of the meeting of the Fascist Grand Council were restricted to an official communique stating the discussion involved purely economic affairs. The grand council meeting lasted three and a half hours and the communique said Mussolini had made a "brief address on internal affairs." This was followed, according to the official word, by a long explanation from Achille Starace on the activities of the Fascist party. The council will meet again tonight.

The last published note of Emperor Haile Selassie contained a vigorous denial of Italian charges that Ethiopians were the aggressors in the recent conflicts along the African frontiers.

Ethiopia Says Its Troops Have Not Advanced a Step.

By the Associated Press.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, Feb. 16.—A Government spokesman said today troops of Emperor Haile Selassie had not advanced a step and had not occupied any point in disputed territory since the Ualual incident, which strained reations between Iaaly and Ethiopia.

In connection with a reported Ethiopian advance, it was pointed out that Chillato, about 60 miles southwest of Ualual, was considered Ethiopian territory. Chillato has been occupied by an Ethiopian garrison since 1931, the communique said.

The spokesman said an Italian attack on the Ethiopian garrison at Gerlogubi Jan. 29 probably was to cover a withdrawal from Afdub, which he said apparently was caused by the exhaustion of the water supply.

A key to the Ethiopian isolation is in the hands of France, for France owns the one railroad that enters the African country. This narrow-gauge, one-track line runs 500 miles from Djibouti on the Red Sea to Addis Ababa, 7000 feet above sea level. Under the recent Franco-Italian accord of Rome, France gave Italy a small share of stock in the railroad.

CORRA HARRIS IN HER WILL PROVIDES FOR 'OPEN HOUSE'

Two Mountain Girls Will Care for Place and Get Profit From Farm.

By the Associated Press.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Feb. 16.—Two mountain girls, under provisions of a will filed yesterday, will keep "open house" for the friends of Corra Harris, Southern writer.

Providing for these girls—Bettie and Trannie Raines—was the one luxury she allowed herself, the author wrote in her will. She said they had given "literally years of their time during their long service to me." Trannie is named head of the house, the will explaining that Bettie "has a profession."

In naming the girls as caretakers of "In the Valley," a log cabin built by the Cherokee Indian, Pine Log," Mrs. Harris directed that her trustee set aside the place as an "open house" and issue an invitation to her friends to visit "this place, not to honor me . . . but that they may rest here as my guests."

The two girls are to receive the net income from the farms, and in the event of the marriage or death of the girls, "or should they no longer desire to remain 'In the Valley,' the park and all its contents are to be offered to the Daughters of the American Revolution to be used as a memorial."

Anti-Masonic Law in Spain.

MADRID, Feb. 16.—Congress approved a law yesterday prohibiting members of the armed forces from belonging to the Masonic order. Sponsors charged, in a bitter attack on Free Masonry, that in this country it was a secret political organization.

MICHAEL O'BRIEN.

ENGLISH JOURNALIST TALKS ON WORLD VISION

Sir Willmott Lewis, in City, Discusses the Obligations of Man.

Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, addressed the Contemporary Club at Hotel Statler last night on "Vision in World Affairs."

The speaker took as his point of departure the year 1919 when the statesmen, gathered at Paris, made "not a peace, but a treaty." The world, he said, still lives in a tract of time which, if not of actual fighting, is nevertheless not of peace, for "everywhere armies and navies are growing, and the bitter will to use them again is excited by aggression and injustice, by wars of tariffs and exclusions, by the epileptic shaking of the exchanges, and by pressure within the nations of unemployment, of poverty, of malnutrition and of disease.

"Domestic uncertainties everywhere draw the thoughts of men and women inward, but in the larger world outside their doors the iron dice are falling, the issue of peace or war is once again to be determined."

Two Kinds of States.

Sir Willmott traced world events through the three great changes of human life—the rise of Christianity, the coming of democracy and nationalism, and the conquest by man of the forces of nature. This led up to a disinction between the typical Western state of the nineteenth century, which he termed "a legal state," and that which the twentieth century seemed to be producing—" a welfare state."

"Today," said Sir Willmott, "it is not so much in the field of material culture, as in the field of social justice that we must explore. There, as everywhere, growth has been continuous, for there, slowly but inevitably, one great moral truth has broken upward through the crust of habit and error—the truth that justice is the whole of morality, that to do wrong is to inflict wrong. The powers we have won from nature will turn the wheels, but to what ends do the wheels revolve?—a question to which the uncritical worship of economic power furnishes no answer.

The Lesson of History.

"We are heritors of great things. We must remember, what all history asks us to remember, that the victory of civilized man and his civilization must depend, not upon his material possessions, but upon his primary virtues, his original qualities as a man. These do not reside in physical strength or ruthless will. The primary quality of man is his social quality, his capacity for living and working adequately with other men, adjusting his mind to theirs, maintaining certain faith and unbroken loyalty despising cruelty and ensuing justice.

"Vision in world affairs shows us, then, a maxim—that morality and justice are one and the same—and a problem as old as the ages. Only with strength drawn from the maxim can we move forward along the path whose ultimate goal is the solution of the problem—the reconciliation of law and liberty, order and progress, authority and conscience, individual and community, man and the state."

Wiley Post Test Flights Today.

By the Associated Press.

AGED HODCARRIER WINS BEST PICTURE PRIZE IN DENVER

Wife Takes in Washings to Let Husband, 82, Devote Himself to Painting.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Feb. 16.—Michael E. O'Brien, 82 years old, until eight years ago a hod carrier, was adjudged Denver's outstanding artist for 1934 yesterday. His painting, "Rest by the Roadside," a pastoral scene, was voted the best production of the year.

O'Brien, asked about his paintings, declared: "I just paint, and when I get through sometimes I have a picture." Mrs. O'Brien, in spotless apron, remarked: "It's like I told you, Mike, you are a better artist than you were a hod carrier—and that is saying something." She has taken in washnig for the last eight years so that her husband could devote himself to colors and easel.

COUNTER-REVOLUTIONISTS ROUNDED UP IN RUSSIA

Director of Railroad Shops Fired When Plant Turns Out 29 Cars on 500 Program.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Feb. 16.—A band of alleged counter-revolutionaries was rounded up today in Leningrad province and a director of one of the Government's large railroad car-building plants was discharged.

A group headed by J. N. Sinakoff, who was described as an old offender, was charged with spreading propaganda among peasants, seeking to obstruct the Government's agricultural plans. They were accused of mixing with the peasants in the guise of farming experts.

Manager Liapin of the Koval car factory was discharged because the plant produced only 29 cars in three months, whereas the Government's program called for 500.

The recent dishcarge of a phonograph factory manager because he arbitrarily cut production plans by 40 per cent was also cited in a public warning.

Simultaneously it was annouhced the manager of the Moscow-Leningrad railroad and the chief of the line's political service were reprimanded severely for negligence resulting in a wreck in which 23 persons were killed on Jan. 6.

PRINCE OF WALES HELPING PLAN FATHER'S SILVER JUBILEE

Calls Meeting for March 1 to Consider a National Thank Offering.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The Prince of Wales took the lead today in the plans for the silver jubilee of his royal father, King George V. He called a meeting for March 1 at St. James's Palace, at which he will submit a plan for a national thank offering.

The King's expressed desire for economy and simplicity in the observances finds expression in the balls to be held at Buckingham Palace May 14 and June 13. These are not officially described as state balls, but will have the character of court balls, which are less costly and less formal. State dinners, however, will be held at Buckingham Palace on May 9 and May 20.

Next to these functions probably the most representative gathering will assemble May 22 for a reception and ball by the Lord Mayor at the Guildhall. The King and Queen will attend. The Lord Mayor and Aldermen, resolved to prevent overcrowding, plan to limit the invitations to 1500.

Bill for New St. Louis Bridge.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Senator Clark of Missouri introduced a bill yesterday authorizing the H. C. Brenner corporation to begin construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River between Cherokee and Osage streets in St. Louis.

JOSE ITURBI, PIANIST, PLAYS AND CONDUCTS

Spanish Virtuoso Appears With St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in Dual Role.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

THE St. Louis Symphony Orchestra played under its second guest conductor of the season yesterday afternoon at the Municipal Auditorium when Jose Iturbi, the Spanish virtuoso, undertook the double role of pianist and leader and—just to make it still harder for himself—went through the whole concert without consulting a score. He pursued his dual function only in the Haydn D Major piano concerto. In the other numbers—the "Marriage of Figaro" overture by Mozart, the ballet pantomime "Love the Sorcerer," by Manuel de Falla, and Cesar Franck's D Minor symphony—he consecrated himself strictly to the baton.

In both the Mozart and Haydn numbers the strings were cut down to almost half their normal strength with the idea, one presumes, of producing a sonority more nearly like that of the eighteenth century orchestras. But since the orchestras of Mozart's day did not perform in auditoriums that seated 3500 persons the result, in this case, was something a little too close to the miniature. All the proportions, however, were nicely preserved in the overture and the concerto and the playing was clean and efficient. The attention that Mr. Iturbi was forced to devote to the players during the concerto did not prevent him from turning out a crisp performance as soloist.

He was less impressive in the two orchestral numbers that followed. One waited in vain during the performance of the "Love the Sorcerer" suite, for some outpouring of authority and temperament such as might have been expected from Mr. Iturbi because of his Spanish nativity. Any hope of being thrown into a swoon by the sheer sensuous charm of the music was also doomed to disappointment. It was just a reasonably accurate sounding of the notation.

Mme. Helen Traubel sang the incidental songs in a voice so frightened that it could scarcebly be recognized as her own.

The Franck Symphony went better, but was hardly distinguished. There were too many long stretches—especially in the slow movement—when the conductor seemed to have remembered the score too well and the music too little. The Franck symphony at best is a rather unrewarding composition what with its slithering around from key to key and its incessant sequences and canonical imitations. But when sympathetically performed it at least has a certain mildly affecting religious feeling. Mr. Iturbi came no closer to this quality than he did to the love, the sorcery and the sultry passions of the Falla number.

Besides conducting without a score, Mr Iturbi also made an innovation in the seating arrangement of the orchestra. The cellos and double basses were shifted to the right, the violas to the left and all the brass was placed immediately behind the wood section. Whether for this reason or another—with odds strongly favoring another—the orchestra had less than its normal freshness and muscularity.

PROF. DOUGLAS OF CHICAGO U. FUSION CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR

Home Rule Over Utilities and Reduced Rates One of Planks in His Platform.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16. — Prof. Paul H. Douglas of the University of Chicago became the fusion candidate for Mayor yesterday. Some 1500 backers of the educator have obtained 40,000 signatures on his petitions and said they would have many more before the filing deadline two weeks hence.

Douglas' platform in part follows: "No syndicate control of gambling and vice. Restoration of education facilities cut off by the Nash-Kelly machine. Elimination of graft, no pay-roll padding. Application of the merit system to appointments and promotion.

"Home rule for Chicago utility users, reduced rates. Squeeze $60,000,000 to $80,000,000 of 'water' from the capitalization of the surface lines.

"Police not to be used as strike breakers. Vigorous administration of relief without graft. Municipal ownership of water system with low rates."

MRS. THERESA I. RICKSEN DIES

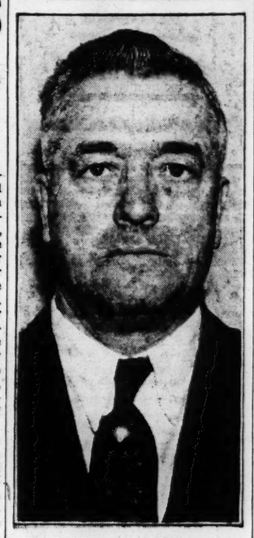

Former St. Louis School Teacher Succumbs at Wilmette, Ill.

Word has reached St. Louis of the death Tuesday at her home in Wilmette, Ill., of Mrs. Theresa I. Ricksen, a former public school teacher here. She was 83 years old, a native of Bavaria, and resided with a son, Robert E. Ricksen, who was formerly a newspaper reporter in St. Louis.

Mrs. Ricksen began teaching German at the Webster School in 1878, after the death of her husband. When instruction in German in the grade schools was dropped she became an English teacher at Bryan Hill School, where she remained until 1902. She was a charter member of the St. Louis Teachers' Mutual Aid Association, formed in 1878.

AMERICANS CALL JAPANESE POLICE AND ARE ARRESTED

Reported to Have Told Consul They Were Treated Brutally; Meanwhile, Thugs Escape.

(Copyright, 1935.)

OSAKA, Japan, Feb. 16.—Three American business men, calling for police protection against two Korean thugs, said they were subjected to brutal and humiliating treatment by Japanese police. The Americans are R. H. K. Irvin, managing director of the Corn Products Refining Corporation; John Scott, treasurer of the company, whose home is in Lexington, Ky.; and William Palmroth, Osaka office manager of the company whose home is in Aberdeen, Wash.

The three called police when the Koreans rushed into their office, flashing knives and threatening their lives. Policemen who arrived on the scene, armed with swords, are said to have tied the arms of the Americans with rope, handcuffed them, and marched them through the main street to police headquarters. There they said they were subjected to a four-hour grilling, then released. They immediately telephoned to the United States Consulate. Apparently the police did not arrest the Koreans.

JACOBY'S 'FOUR ACES' TEAM LEADING FOR BRIDGE TITLE

Ahead of Nearest Competitor by 6500 Points in "Grand National" Contract Finals.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16. — At the end of the first half of the final round of the "Grand National" championship competition for contract bridge teams of four, the four aces team led its opponents by 6500 points last night. Thirty-two boards were played.

The Oswald Jacoby-Richard L. Frey half of the Four Aces team gained 2000 of the points on one hand, setting a redoubled vulnerable three no trump contract. Their partners, Howard Schenken and Michael Gottlieb, played the hand undoubled at three spades, and made it.

Members of the opposing team, entered from the Whist Club of New York, were Jean Mattheys, Walter Beinecke, Hugh Jackson and Charles Van Vleck.

The final 32 boards of the match will be played today or tomorrow.

OIL STATE GOVERNORS FOR 'HOT' OIL CONTROL

Dallas Conference Asks Congress for Speedy Action; Refuses to Censure Ickes.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 16.—The oil State Governor's control conference adopted a resolution today calling on Congress for speedy passage of a bill carrying out the principal of prohibition of the movement of illegally produced oil in interstate commerce.

The resolution, as originally offered, called for a measure similar to the Connally bill now before Congress, but was amended to more general form.

The governors and their representatives tabled a resolution yesterday censuring Secretary of the Interior Ickes as they perfected the draft of an interstate oil production compact which omitted any mention of price fixing or proration.

Ickes, in a magzine article, made statements interpreted in the resolution as charging some were attending the conference here "with their tongues in their cheeks."

Ralph Pryor, of the Kansas delegation, made the motion to table. It was carried by a vote of 4 to 3, with Michigan, Illinois, Kansas and New Mexico voting to table and Texas, Arkansas and Colorado opposed.

Efforts to arrange a production compact were deadlocked, with Gov. Marland insisting on protection for small high-cost producers and Gov. James V. Allred of Texas refusing to participate in what he called a price-fixing scheme. Marland said that Federal control was imminent unless the conference showed tangible accomplishments.

After repeated efforts to provide in the compact or some form of production allotment through the agreement, Marland offered the following language as definition of a form of oil waste which the pact would seek to eliminate.

"Production of oil in such excess quantities as would cause the abandonment of unminded reserves recoverable by pumping or other artificial methods."

The amendment was offered after the last paragraph of a plan submitted by Allread had been approved in tentative form, with minor amendments that left intact the Texas executive's program based solely on the prevention of physical waste.

Allred then announced, "If that language is inserted you can count Texas out."

Debate-Limiting Rule in House for Oil Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16. — The Rules Committee of the House yesterday decided to report a special rule Monday to limit debate on the oil control bill to two hours.

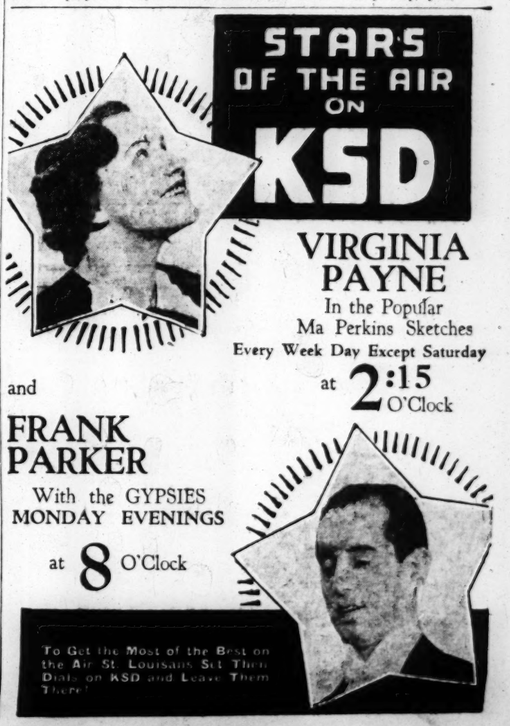

The bill was drawn, as was the Senate measure by Senator Connally (Dem.), Texas, to replace Section 9-C of the National Recovery Act, invalidated by the Supreme Court, which forbade movement of contraband oil across state lines.

The bill prohibits such transportation unless the President finds that the prohibition causes a disparity between supply and demand, provides for confiscation of illegal oil, sets up penalties or imprisonment for violations of its provisions. It is to expire June 1, 1935.

VIENNA POLICE SEIZE 45 AT RADICAL MEETINGS

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Feb. 16.—In suburban Floridsdorf, where Socialist revolutionists were shelled with artillery in last year's civil war, left radicals held three meetings today. Police scurried from one zone to another and made 45 arrests. Red pamphlets were scattered in parts of the city. Two Soviet flags were momentarily displayed.

STOCKS MOVE NARROWLY IN LIGHT TRADE AT WEEK END

A Few Scattered Specialties Advance but Others Are Equally Soft — Closing Is Irregular.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The stock market resumed its waiting attitude today, most traders apparently having concluded that the mild upturn of the previous session was a little premature. A few scattering specialties advanced, but others were equally soft. The leaders were narrow. The close was irregular. Transfers approximated 350,000 shares.

News of importance to the markets generally was scarce. Business and industrial developments were without any especial significance. The gold clause controversy continued as a restrictive speculative factor. Few cared to rush into the market arena pending the Supreme Court's pronouncement.

Commodities were moderately mixed. Grains showed a disposition to edge forward, but cotton was unable to get anywhere in particular. Rubber futures sagged, while sugar and hide contracts were inclined to firmness. No pronounced trend was exhibited by bonds. Foreign exchanges moved cautiously.

Some of the Changes.

Sugar shares reflected advancing prices in the staple. South Puerto Rico, American Sugar Refining and Cuban-American Sugar preferred were up 1 to around 2 points. Crossley Radio was up about a point in relatively active dealings. On the other hand, National Department Stores preferred dropped some 5 points, following yesterday's announcement that reorganization plans had been presented to the Federal Court in New Jersey for approval.

Homestake Mining lost 8 points, and others, down fractionally to around a point, included U. S. Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, American Smelting, National Department Stores common, White Motor, American Waterworks, United Corporation preferred, American Telephone, U. S. Steel, Continental Can and Liggett & Myers "B." Such issues as du Pont, Santa Fe, New York Central, National Distillers, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Western Union, Consolidated Gas, Chrysler, General Motors, American Can, General Electric, Case, Montgomery Ward and Sears-Roebuck were unchanged to a shade higher or lower.

Sterling Closes Lower.

Corn finished unchanged to ⅜ of a cent a bushel higher and wheat was off ⅛ to ⅜. Oats, rye and barley were off small fractions. At Winnipeg, wheat eased ⅛ to ¼. Cotton was unchanged to 10 cents a bale lower. The British pound ended with a loss of ⅜ of a cent at $4.87⅛, but the French franc was up .00⅝ of a cent at 6.60⅛ cents. Belgas, Swiss francs and guilders advanced .01 to .04 of a cent. Canadian dollars eased 1-16 of a cent to 99.75 cents.

Overnight Developments.

In the Stock Exchange proposal to the Securities and Exchange Commission to enlarge its governing board and make office partners of exchange firms eligible as governors, observers saw indications of a possible compromise on other SEC recommendations which have been sharply disputed within exchange circles.

Day's 15 Most Active Stocks.

Closing price and net change of the 15 most active stocks: Nat Dept Strs 2⅜, down 1⅜; Studebaker ⅜, unchanged; Paramount Pub ctf 3½, down ¼; Servel 8¾, down ⅛; Columbia Gas & El 5¼, unchanged; United Corp pf 24½, down 1; Elec Auto-Lite 26, up ½; United Corp 2, unchanged; South Porto Ric Sug 23¾, up 1; Omnibus 5½, up ⅜; Gt West Sug 29⅞, unchanged; Crosley Radio 15⅛, up ¾; Pierce-Arrow ⅞, unchanged; Consol Film pf 21, down 1; Gen Gas & El A ⅜, down ⅛.

Net Earnings $1.01 a Share.

Rhodes-Perry-Martin, Inc., reports net earnings of $1.01 cents a share on the common stock for 1934, compared with a loss of $2.44 a share in 1933. The company makes dry cleaning machinery and synthetic solvents.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The United States dollar, on a market made inactive by the pending gold clause decision in the United States, improved fractionally today to close at 4.87⅜ from an opening price of 4.87½. It closed yesterday at 4.87 7-16. The French franc closed at 73.84 to the pound as compared with yesterday's close of 73.93. Sterling was weaker in most centers.

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, Feb. 16.—The United States dollar sold today at 2.493 marks (40.11 cents to the mark), unchanged from yesterday's quotation.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—The United States dollar closed today at 15.15 francs (6.60 cents to the franc), unchanged from yesterday's closing price, on a weak market.

COTTON MARKET CLOSES UNCHANGED TO 2 LOWER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Cotton futures opened barely steady, unchanged to 2 lower under liquidation and foreign selling.

March opened 12.40c; May, 12.48c; July, 12.51c; October, 12.41c; December, 12.47c; January, 12.49c.

On the whole orders seemed to be pretty well divided at the opening and the market held fairly steady right after the call. There was some selling here through houses with continental connections and a little selling by the South combined with scattering liquidation. These offerings were absorbed by covering and trade buying with the market holding around 12.48 for May or about 1 to 3 points net lower before session had gone far. Part of the business was attributed to evening up for over the week-end and the possibility of a decision on the gold cases before the Court recesses on Monday.

Cotton futures closed steady, unchanged to 2 lower. March 12.41-42; May 12.48; July 12.52; Oct. 12.41; Dec. 12.46; Jan. 12.50n. Spot steady; middling 12.65. nNominal.

Discussed Rail Operations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Referring to reports current in railroad circles, Ralph Budd of Chicago, president of the Burlington Railroad, issued a statement denying the Burlington is contemplating purchasing the Mobile & Ohio Railroad.

He said officials of the Gulf, Mobile & Northern Railroad, in which the Burlington owns a certain stock interest, have been conferring with officials of the Mobile & Ohio on pooling their operations but nothing had resulted.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The week's dividend announcements contained 12 favorable changes against 19 in the previous week, Standard Statistics Co. reported today. There were five unfavorable changes against six the week before.

Consumption of sugar in the 14 principal European countries during 1934 totaled 7,467,764 long tons, raw sugar, against 7,194,389 tons consumed during 1933, according to Lamborn & Co. Production for these countries during the season which started Sept. 1, 1934, and which has just come to a close, is placed at 6,405,170 long tons, raw sugar, as contrasted with 5,457,390 tons in the previous season.

Consumption of crude rubber by manufacturers in the United States in January amounted to 47,103 long tons, compared with 36,662 in December and 39,284 in January, 1934, according to reports to the Rubber Manufacturers' Association.

State and municipal financing scheduled for the coming week totals only $8,676,919, compared with $14,488,096 in the current week and the weekly average so far this year of $17,483,309, according to the Daily Bond Buyer. Among the week's offerings will be various pieces of municipal and state paper aggregating $4,938,450 owned by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Directors of Armour & Co. have extended from March 10 to April 1 the time in which holders of the 7 per cent preferred stock of the Armour & Co. of Illinois can exchange their holdings for new prior preferred and common stock.

Business in wool goods markets was less active during the last week, says the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. The slackening was attributed to outside influences, including the awaited gold clause decision and Washington legislative questions.

National Distillers Products Corporation, it was announced today, has contracted to purchase the business of W. A. Gaines & Co., including its distillery at Frankfort, Ky.

NATIONAL CANDY 1934 NET PROFITS $488,740

The National Candy Co. reports net earnings of $488,740 for 1934, against $713,939 the year before. Earnings as reported for 1934 include an unstated interest of minorty stockholders of subsidiary companies which was excluded from the 1933 report.

Earnings in 1934 were equal to $1.53 a share on the common, compared with $2.99 the year before. In a letter to stockholders Vincent L. Price, president, attributed the decline in profits to the drouth, processing taxes and codes wihch could not be offset by higher selling prices because of competitive conditions.

The Dec. 31 balance sheet lists current assets of $4,655,242, and current liabilities of $690,469. Current assets include: cash, $647,831; bank certificates of deposit, $150,000; securities, $515,379; receivables, $1,094,457; and inventory, $2,204,404. SMALL CHANGE IN GRAIN LIST AT THE CLOSE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Feb. 16.—Grain futures closed down from the top for day, with wheat bid a shade lower to unchanged asking price while corn was unchanged to a shade better.

Winnipeg started out unchanged and closed ⅛c lower.

CORN EASES AFTER BEING HIGHEST SINCE JAN. 21

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Grain values averaged higher today, with corn attaining the topmost point since Jan. 21, but easing at the finish.

Uncertainties regarding a gold decision by the Supreme Court had a tendency at times to restrict traders from speculating freely. Fluctuations were narrow, with reactions at the last ascribed mainly to holders who could realize a profit.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 9,760,000 bushels, corn 8,817,000. Open interest in wheat was 99,088,000 bushels, and in corn 64,693,000.

Corn closed steady at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ higher, May 86¼@⅜c, wheat ⅛@⅜s off, May 97¼@⅜c, oats at ¼ decline to ⅛ advance, and provisions 2 cents to 7 cents down.

Notable firmness distinguished grain prices early today.

Prospects indicated that for the first time since January, 1933, the United States corn visible supply on Monday next would total well under 30,000,000 bushels. Opening unchanged to ⅛c higher, May 86¼@⅜c, corn soon rose all around. Wheat started unchanged to ¼c off, May 97⅜@½c, and subsequently scored a general advance.

Trading in the various grain pits broadened quickly. With little delay, corn and wheat both surpassed the week's previous high price level. Talk was current that apparently the entire stock of corn in Chicago will be exhausted within 12 weeks, namely by May 1.

Total unsold corn in Chicago at present is estimated at only about 6,000,000 bushels. Extreme paucity of this amount was underlined today by the fact that during 1934 Chicago received 55,500,000 bushels of corn, which added to a carryover from 1933 made an aggregate of 76,587,000 bushels.

Profit taking on price upturns, however, restricted immediate gains in corn, as well as in wheat, to fractional limits.

Corn traders gave special heed to assertions that high meat prices tend to curtail marketing of corn by farmers when feeding is more profitable.

Oats reflected strength of other grains. Provisions held about steady, responsive to action of hog values.

BOND TRADE SMALL AND CHANGES NARROW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Trading in today's two-hour session of the bond market was an apathetic affair, and with volume restricted, price changes were held to a minimum.

Most of the fixed interest bearing securities that appeared on the tap sold either unchanged or small fractions below their previous final prices.

U. S. Government bonds and some other issues eased in the dull market, while here and there a plus sign was noted in some of the liens.

Treasury 3¼s of 1943-45 at 104.14, Home Owners, Loan 2¾s at 99.5 and 4th Liberty 4¼s of 1933-38 at 101.26 were typical of the minor recessions in Federal bonds at one period.

Pennsylvania RR 4½s of 1965 at 107⅞, Northern Pacific 4s at 105, and N. Y. Central refunding 5s at 62⅞ were a few of the bright spots in the rail group with fractional advances.

WORLD STOCKS OF COPPER REPORTED OFF IN JANUARY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—World stocks of copper were reduced 14,000,000 pounds in January, according to reports prepared for the copper trade.

The reduction in North and South American stocks of refined copper were 32,000,000 pounds and increase in foreign stocks was 18,000,000 pounds. World stocks of refined copper on Feb. 1 were 975,500,000 pounds.

Apparent consumption of copper in the United States during January were 76,500,000 pounds.

BUSINESS NOTES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Production of newsprint in the United States and Canada in January totaled 282,625 tons, compared with 272,568 in the same month last year and 319,321 in December. Canadian mills turned out 201,959 tons, against 239,544 in December and 188,374 in January last year. United States mills during the month produced 80,666 tons, compared with 79,777 in December and 84,104 in January last year. The figures are from the News Print Service Bureau.

Orders for machine tools showed a slight improvement in the wholesale market this week. For the past three weeks buying has been retarded due largely to the uncertainty regarding the gold ruling.

Comment on Business.

ST. LOUIS AND DISTRICT—Evidence of increasing activity in heavier industrial lines continued; current steel rate highest for this period since 1930. Diversion of road-building funds to direct relief lowered production of cement and kindred products. Because of inclement weather, retail sales dropped 7 to 10 per cent from previous week's total; first decline of consequence this year, but total held 5 to 7 per cent above year ago. Curtailment of Government fund distribution reduced wholesale orders from rural areas. Commodity prices higher; butter and eggs 100 per cent over 1934.

BALTIMORE—Business was striving to hold to the high rate of activity displayed in the opening month of last year, though some minor recessions were reported in scattered lines. Recent high level of industrial activity maintained. Wholesale buying continued to broaden, with commitments for spring goods in excess of last year. Retail trade regained an active pace following the blizzard-like weather of preceding weeks; sales averaging 13 to 15 per cent above 1934 figures.

CHICAGO—Retail trade slower during week, but total sales still were ahead of last year. Wholesale business running 15 to 20 per cent above 1934 volume, due to heavy orders booked during Interstate Merchants' Council sessions. Automobile sales sharply up from February, 1934. Electric refrigerator jobbers reported big gain over year ago. Mail-order houses expecting best spring seasons in several years. Building permits four times comparative 1934 week's. Steel ingot output eased slightly. High retail meat prices reacted on livestock.

CLEVELAND—Heavy buying before sales tax became effective lowered retail sales for this week, but total remained higher than a year ago. Wholesale trade running ahead of 1934 volume, except in drugs. Labor difficulties causing some manufacturers to curtail operations; factory employment still higher than last year at this time. Steel rate off one point to 78 per cent; gain of three points scheduled for current week. Automobile parts factories at capacity; paint sales in excess of last season. Orders for machine tools increasing.

DETROIT—Industrial activity continued its upward trend, with employment largest for this period since 1929. Industrial power consumption index at new high, passing previous peak in April, 1929. Automobile production up to 75,000 for week; little consideration give strike rumors. Retail sales 7 to 10 per cent above total for same 1934 week. Wholesale trade steady, with volume 20 per cent larger than last year. Trend toward increased prices in many lines; percentage of sales in the better quality range increasing.

INDIANAPOLIS—Slight gain in retail sales for week; volume 5 to 10 per cent larger than for comparative week in February, 1934, with strongest demand for women's ready-to-wear and men's clothing. Wholesale buying expanding steadily; orders for dry goods 10 per cent and for hardware 15 per cent above last year's total. Manufacturing operations above 1934 level; largest gain reported by manufacturers of automobile parts.

KANSAS CITY—Retail trade irregular during week, with volume about even with last year to 4 per cent higher. Instalment sales of women's clothing, jewelry, radios and refrigerators reduced. Largest gains in wholesale buying in women's wear and millinery divisions; orders for dry goods and work clothing under last year. Building materials moving out at better rate. Production in all departments of packing industry curtailed, due to drouth and surplus activities of AAA.

LOUISVILLE—General trend in business locally and in rural districts continued satisfactory, showing an increase of about 10 per cent over volume of corresponding 1934 period. Wholesale volume expanding steadily in spring apparel lines, millinery, shoes, dry goods, hardware, bicycles and bicycle supplies. Orders for men's clothing 10 to 15 per cent larger than last year. Coal trade marking time, following brisk movement during cold spell.

PITTSBURGH—Industrial operations steady during week, despite drop of two points in steel output to average of 42 per cent of capacity; largest January steel output since 1930, and 44 per cent above that of January, 1934. Production of electrical equipment above last year; large movement of refrigerators and household appliances. Moderate improvement in retail sales over January level; volume up slightly from 1934 figures. Wholesale orders for dry goods and shoes higher by 12 and 30 per cent, respectively, than a year ago.

TOLEDO—While department store sales were 2 to 3 per cent lower than a week earlier, the gain over the corresponding period of 1934 ranged from 2 to 5 per cent. Poor showing attributed to heavy consumer buying prior to imposition of sales tax. Wholesale orders steady at previous level; 1934 total orders exceeded. Manufacturing operations expanding in all directions; total of employed largest recorded since August, 1931. Threatened labor troubles in glass and automobile plants settled amicably, with substantial wage increases granted.

YOUNGSTOWN—Continued expansion of industrial operations resulting in a gradual rise in total of employed. Retail sales lagging somewhat behind expected volume, but total was above comparative 1934 figures. Valley steel-mill operations started week at 65 per cent of capacity; highest rate thus far this year. For comparative week in 1934 the rate was 44 per cent of capacity, in 1933 at 20 per cent, in 1932 at 36 per cent and in 1931 at 50 per cent.

NOTE—Summary is made up of reports covering period inclusive of Monday of week of issuance.

WEEKLY WOOL SUMMARY

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—The "Commercial Bulletin" says:

"Manufacturers continue to await developments in the market and buy only such wool as they must have for completing contracts or such wool as is made attractive to them in price. Naturally, the market is showing an easier tendency. Sales are running rather under half normal weekly average. A program for the 1935 clip is expected to be worked out very shortly.

"The foreign markets are easier. Bradford is back to 23 pence for average 64s tops. Australia reports lower prices on Merinos at 42 cents, clean basis in bond, for best English top-making 64-70s. This figures out a parity for 12-months Texas fine wools at about 65 cents, clean basis, or 10 cents clean under approved quotations.

"Manufacturers are producing fair yardages of goods still, but seem to be reasonably well covered against these contracts.

"Further sales of mohair, aggregating a million pounds, have been made in Texas at 16 @ 26 cents, respectively, for adult and kid hair.

The "Bulletin" publishes the following quotations:

BOSTON WOOL MARKET.

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—(U. S. Department of Agriculture).—A steady trade in the fine western grown wools in Boston during the past week was accompanied by an increase in sales in medium fleeces. The latter, however, sold at a cent lower than prices asked during the previous week, most sales closing in the past week at 25 @ 25½ cents in the grease. The finer strictly combing fleeces were quoted steady and had some call for small quantities at 28 @ 28½ cents in the grease for 56s, ⅜ blood, at 28 @ 28 cents for 58s, 60s, ½ blood, and at 27 @ 28 cents for 64s and finer fleeces. Bulk average French combing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags were steady at 67 @ 68 cents scoured basis.

MISSOURI MUD REPORTED WORST IN 30 YEARS

Farmers of Randolph County Are Unable to Haul Supplies or Take Livestock to Market.

MAIL CARRIERS ARE FORCED TO GO AFOOT

Pastures Too Deep for Stock to Reach Food—Condition Is Antithesis to Six Months Ago.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOBERLY, Mo., Feb. 16.—Randolph County and this section of the State are experiencing the worst siege of mud which residents can remember in the past 30 years. Country roads are impassable, except on foot or on horseback, and fields and farm lots are almost knee deep.

The condition has existed since late in December, following heavy rains and snow. With recent thaws and added rains the mud has become much worse. Streams are running bank full, and in some places are overflowing. Ponds, lakes and wells are full and overflowing.

Less than six months ago farmers were faced with exactly the opposite condition. They had no stock water and were selling off their stock as fast as possible before the animals died of thirst, and Moberly residents were restricted to using city water only for drinking, cooking and sanitation purposes. The city's water supply was at its lowest point in history.

Almost Barred From Town.

Farmers are bearing the brunt of the mud. It is almost impossible for them to get to town to buy necessary supplies. The problem of getting their marketable livestock to market is a real puzzle, and in many cases is impossible, resulting in a sharp cut in shipments and resultant heavy losses to the farmers.

Because of the drouth last summer most farmers hereabouts must buy feed this winter. With their supply almost exhausted, how to get feed to their farms offers another puzzling situation. Only by use of four and six horse teams on very small loads can the feed be moved.

Some who have a little roughage left in pastures and stalk fields are even finding they can't use that, because the fiedls and pastures are too deep with mud for the stock to get to it. In other instances, the roughage has been of such poor quality as to cause death of animals eating it.

Corn-Hog Signers Blocked.

County Agent E. M. Woods of Randolph County reports road conditions are holding down the number of corn-hog contract signers in the county. The farmers cannot reach the sign-up meetings because of impassable roads. He told of one incident alone where 12 farmers near Yates, in the south part of the county, wanted to sign contracts, but could not get away from their homes because of mud.

Rural mail carriers also are feeling effects of the muddy roads. There isn't a carrier in this north central section of Missouri who doesn't have to walk and wade mud on some part of his route each day. He drives his car or team as far as possible on gravel and other hard-surfaced roads, then he walks the rest of the way.

Mail Also a Problem.

But that isn't all. The muddy roads have made the rural carrier's mail burden heavier. Farmers have been unable to get to town for supplies, so they order by parcel post. As a result mail order houses and stores selling by mail are enjoying increased business, while business in the larger towns, usually patronized by the farmers, is suffering.

Walter C. Buchanan, Moberly rural carrier whose route covers the most country roads and is the longest of the five rural routes here, has found it necessary to employ three helpers in order to cover all of his route each day. And all of them walk several miles daily that all their patrons may be served.

CLASS SEES MORGAN LIBRARY

First Student Group Permitted to View Rare Manuscripts.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The Morgan Library, with its treasured antique manuscripts, was opened yesterday for the first time to a university art class. Fifty graduate students of New York University gathered in the classical Grecian building adjoining the Morgan town house, with members of the fine arts faculty of Columbia University and several officials of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

A Flemish treatise on astrology, dating from around 1400, the famous Gutenberg Bible, and other rare illuminated manuscripts, subject of the day's lecture, were spread out in a glass case before the eyes of students. Heretofore only a few "specially qualified" scholars had been permitted to do research work among the manuscripts, books and paintings valued at $8,500,000.

ONE-TIME winner of a New York beauty contest, and aspirant to movie roles, whose love of fine feathers landed her in the Los Angeles jail, suspected of stealing $1200 worth of clothes. "I'm willing to take my medicine," she told police.

Soviet Manager Reports Group's Income Has Risen From 73,000 to 1,000,000 Rubles.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Feb. 16.—A group of farmers who came to Russia from the United States in 1921 have at last won their long, uphill fight to wrest a living from the Russian soil, the congress of shock farmers was told yesterday. M. Bogdanoff, manager of the communal farm 400 miles south of Moscow, said inhospitable elements had caused the original group, including nine nationalities, to dwindle greatly.

The crop yield has been trebled, Bogdanoff related, and the group's income, which began ascending sharply four years ago, has jumped from 73,000 to more than 1,000,000 rubles annually. The capital has increased from 43,000 to 2,500,000 rubles, and the land is now yielding more than two tons of wheat to the acre.

Other speakers said collective farmers were rapidly being supplied with radios. They described the organization of the farmers into sharp-shooting defense brigades. Women, the congress was told, are coming more and more into positions of authority on the farms.

PILOT MAKES CRASH LANDING, NO ONE SERIOUSLY INJURED

Motor of Passenger Plane Fails in Wooded Section Near Sullivan, Mo.

Forced to land in wooded country by a failing engine, Pilot W. B. McAlister set his American Airlines plane down in a small pasture near Sullivan, Mo., yesterday afternoon, without substantial injury to himself or his passengers. The airplane, a low-wing, high-speed monoplane, was wrecked.

McAlister left Lambert-St. Louis Field at 2:07 p. m. for Dallas, Tex., and less than half hour later radioed that he was going down with a failing engine near Sullivan, 60 miles southwest of St. Louis. Leaving the wheels of his retractable leanding gear in the folded position, to avert the possibility of the plane overturning, he landed in a small field, went between trees which knocked off both wings, and came to a stop after sliding through a hedge and fence.

His face was scratched. One passenger, A. C. Greening, a hardware merchant, of New York, suffered an injury to his thumb, and the other, L. H. Gray, an oil man, was unhurt.

TWO HELD IN BOMBINGS IN ILLINOIS MINE FEUD

By the Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Feb. 16. — Herman Stovall of Muddy and Elliott Wydick of Eldorado, both members of the Progressive Miners of America, are under arrest here charged with complicity in recent bombings in connection with the Illinois miners' feud.

The men were charged with unlawful procuring of dynamite with intent to use it for unlawful injury to property. Special Assistant Attorney-General Emory Smith predicted that further arrests would "end mine warfare in Illinois."

Smith said Stovall was arrested as one of the men wanted for the bombing Dec. 2 of the Big Four Railroad spur at the Harco Peabody mine. A rainroad car containing explosives was started down the track toward the tipple, but the explosion occurred before the car reached the tipple.

Wydick, Smith said, was arrested on a charge of bombing Herman Turner's automobile in Eldorado several weeks ago.

Father Seeks Fred Barker's $18,000.

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., Feb. 16. — George Barker, elderly tourist camp caretaker, is seeking the $18,000 estate of an outlaw son, Fred—one of his four boys who turned to crime. Claude Kenney, attorney, and Frank Dixon, a friend of the father, have filed claim to the $14,500 in currency, five diamonds valued at $1500, a new automobile and clothing Federal Agents found in the Oklawaha (Fla.) hideout where they killed Fred Barker and his mother in a machine gun fight Jan. 16.

SENATORS TILT SARCASTICALLY AT TOWNSEND

Harrison, at Hearing, Asks Him If Pensioners Could Spend $200 a Month "Shooting Craps."

"OH, NOW," PROTESTS AUTHOR OF PLAN

He Stands His Ground and Insists His Old Age Scheme Is "Sound Economic Proposal."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Dr. F. E. Townsend tried to convince the Senate Finance Committee today that giving $200 monthly pensions to all persons over 60 years old was a "simple expedient" for meeting the nation's economic troubles.

The committee subjected Dr. Townsend, author of the Townsend pension plan, to a sarcastic, sometimes humorous cross-examination. He stood his ground, contending his scheme would probably double the volume of business and bring an era of plenty.

When Townsend explained that his plan called for each pensioner to spend his $200 for commodities or services each month, Chairman Harrison asked:

"Would shooting craps with half a dozen other fellows be services?" "Oh, now," Townsend replied, somewhat taken back.

"But buying the dice would be a commodity?" Senator Barkley (Dem.), Kentucky, suggested. "Yes," Townsend agreed.

"What are you going to do with the white collar man on a fixed salary?" Harrison asked. "Enhance his ability to buy by increasing his pay."

Paying for the Plan.

Harrison said that with 10,000,000 or more aged, the plan would cost $24,000,000,000 a year. But a 2 per cent tax would raise only $5,000,000,000 leaving a deficit of $19,000,000,000 a year.

"Yes," Townsend said, "but we will not be able to put 10,000,000 on the pension immediately. It took two years to get 4,000,000 men into the army. We would have to examine each citizen for his citizenship and age, as we examined applicants for the army."

"Would we have much trouble drafting people to take this pension?" Senator Connally (Dem.), Texas asked. "Oh now," Townsend said.

"Well, you were comparing it to raising an army," Connally recalled.

Harrison remarked that in some counties there were 500 Negroes to one white person.

"Do you think they would work if they were given $200 a month?" Harrison asked. "I know he would work if you used the same coercive methods you have always used."

Says He Thinks It Is Sound.

"Doctor, do you believe this is a sound economic plan?" Barkley asked. "I know it is," Townsend replied firmly.

"Would the plan increase the cost of a Ford car?" Harrison asked. "No, it would decrease the cost."

"Though there would be a 2 per cent tax on every part?" Harrison asked.

Townsend launched into a discussion of Henry Ford's theory of mass production and high wages, referring to it as "Henry's philosophy."

"What would these people buy with $200 a month?" Senator Barkley asked. "Why bless your soul," Townsend replied, "I should think anyone who had ever had that salary would know."

"How would they spend it?" Barkley asked again, pointing out that an aged man and his wife would bet $4800 a year. "Buy a car, rebuild their home, refurnish it, travel, buy books, get things for their children," Townsend replied.

"Saving Wrong in Principle."

"Are you opposed to saving money?" Senator Barkley asked. "Yes, it is wrong in principle," Townsend replied. He said prosperity was dependent on the exchange of money.

"Somebody will get this money we turn over to the aged and save it," Barkley said. "Henry Ford would get it," Connally injected. "He would not only get his own, but everybody else's."

Senator Couzens (Rep.), Michigan, interrupted to ask how much the Townsend organization had collected. "Less than $50,000," Townsend said.

"How much have you spent?" "About $45,000."

Townsend said most of the collection and organization work was voluntary, but that six agents had been paid.

Senator Hastings (Rep.), Delaware, asked if Townsend had considered cutting the pension where two or more aged persons lived together. "It would be suicidal," he replied.

Couzens said it would "encourage the sale of marriage licenses." "Not beyond 60," Barkley interjected.

Harrison asked whether pensioned soldiers would come under the plan. "I expect they could be persuaded to exchange their pensions for a $200 one," Townsend said dryly.

"Rockefeller and Ford."

Senator Black (Dem.), Alabama, asked if it was "fair to make the wage earner pay a sales tax to give a pension to Rockefeller and Ford." "There are only three or four Fords and Rockefellers in the country," Townsend replied, adding that his plan would increase pay and jobs for the average man.

"But you are putting the tax on the underprivileged to aid the underprivileged," Black protested. Townsend contended the rich would pay more of the tax than the poor. He estimated that 4,500,000 of those over 60 are now employed and their jobs would go to others.

"If this is such a good thing for those over 60," Harrison asked, "why not make it 40 or 50?" "Sixty is only a starting point," Townsend said. "We don't know when we will have to reduce it to 50. If we continue to increase overproduction capacity, the time is coming when we will have to reduce the age."

Townsend became weary and sat down. He used both hands to gesture as he talked.

Townsend was questioned closely about his organization. He said about 60 per cent of the signers—he estimates he has from 20,000,000 to 25,000,000—were below 60 years of age. The books of the organization sell for 25 cents cost 2 cents, he said. About 450,000 people have joined the local clubs, he added.

He submitted an audited balance sheet for the organization from Jan. 30, 1934, to Oct. 31, 1934. It showed a balance on hand of $7.89 at the beginning of the period and $9834 at the end, with receipts of $37,893 and disbursements of $28,058.

Secretary Questioned.

Robert E. Clements, secretary and treasurer of the organization, said in addition to the original payments for the booklets, the clubs have donated about $11,000 to maintain the office in Washington.

Harrison asked if Clements had any other "schemes" for raising money. Clements raised his eyebrows at the word "schemes" and Harrison apologized.

A moment later Harrison asked if the organization got any "rake-off" from the publication of a Townsend plan song. "We got no percentage," Clements replied with dignity, emphasizing the word "percentage."

As the questioning turned back to Townsend he said he received only about $50 a week.

DISTRIBUTION OF ESTATE OF WILLIAM PYE ORDERED

Judge O'Malley Carries Out Supreme Court Affirmation in $500,000 Trust Provision.

Distribution of the $500,000 trust estate of William R. Pye, dry goods merchant, who died 46 years ago, was directed by Circuit Judge O'Malley yesterday. It is to be divided between the assignees of the late Mrs. Louise Chapman and the estate of her sister, Mrs. Fannie Higbee, who were nieces of Mr. Pye's deceased wife. Mrs. Chapman's son, Benjamin G. Chapman Jr., was successor trustee.

Several years ago similar distribution of the trust property was ordered by the Circuit Court, but the matter was delayed pending an appeal to the Supreme Court by four daughters of the late Mrs. William B. Edgar, who was also a niece of Mrs. Pye. They contended they were entitled to participate in the distribution. The ruling of the Circuit Court was affirmed.

In making the order, Judge O'Malley approved an award of $20,000 in favor of the law firm of Bryan, Williams, Cave & McPheeters, counsel for the trustee. The fee is for legal services in the appeal. Previously the firm had beeen allowed $25,000 for services rendered the estate up to 1930.

Adverse Nevada Child Labor Vote.

By the Associated Press.

CARSON CITY, Nev., Feb. 16.—The Senate defeated, 10 to 7, yesterday a resolution calling for Nevada's ratification of the child labor amendment to the Federal Constitution. Reconsideration will be sought Monday. The resolution was approved by the House.

PEARLSTONE PRINTING CO. LOSES ITS BLUE EAGLE

State NRA Office Charges $1200 in Back Wages Is Due St. Louis Firm's Employes.

The Pearlstone Printing Co., 906 Lucas avenue, has been deprived of its right to display the Blue Eagle because of non-compliance with the hours and wages and trade practice provisions of the Commercial Relief Printing Code under which it operated, Charles L. Hodge, acting State NRA Director, announced today.

The State NRA office found about $1200 was due employes of the company for back wages, Hodge said. Isadore Pearlstone, president of the company, signed a certificate of compliance with the code last July 31. Since then, according to Hodge, he has pleaded financial inability to pay the back wages.

Pearlstone denied his firm had not adhered to the hours and wages provisions of the code. It has not complied with the minimum prices set by the code, he said, because last spring he bid on several Board of Educatin printing jobs at minimum code prices, was underbid by several competitors, and did not get any of the work. He has 13 employes.

$500 TAKEN FROM WOMAN IN NEW YORK BUS HOLDUP

Two Passengers Cover Driver and 14 Others and Then Escape in Taxicab.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Two young gunmen stopped a bus in which they were riding yesterday, held up the 14 passengers and driver, and escaped in a taxicab with $500 taken from one woman passenger.

The victim was Mrs. Evelyn Morfesis, 40 years old, who operates the bus station's restaurant, and has frequently cashed checks for employes of the bus line on which she was riding. The woman had drawn the money from a bank a few minutes before she boarded the bus. The two gunmen, having apparent knowledge that Mrs. Morfesis was carrying the money, sat next to their victim and her bodyguard, Walter Wollman, a customer at her restaurant.

Suddenly, as the bus reached Second avenue, they arose. One of them held the driver and his passengers at bay. The second demanded Mrs. Marfesis' money. After ordering the bus stopped, they divided the money and stepped into the taxicab which sped down Second avenue.

REPORTS CHILD TOXIN DEATH DUE TO DOCTOR'S MISTAKE

Health Officer Says Interne Did Not Read Label on Bottle Before Making Inoculation.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16. — A report on the death of 4-year-old Natalie Rojnavsky, was sent by Dr. J. C. Geiger, City Health officer, to the United State Surgeon-General, the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association and the editor of the California State Medical Journal yesterday.

Dr. Geiger said the child died from an experimental toxin administered by mistake instead of the protective diphtheria toxoid. He said the toxin was correctly labeled, but the administering interne, Dr. Kathleen Murphy, gave it to the child "without proper reading of contents of label." He said the fatal mixture apparently had been intended for experimental work on animals.

Physicians are trying to save the lives of four other children inoculated with the toxin. Dr. Geiger said he thought all of them would recover.

SCHWAB TO TESTIFY IN MELLON TAX SUIT

Steel Master Expected to Back Ex-Secretary on Profits on Stock Sale.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 16.—Charles M. Schwab, the steel master, heads a long list of notables who have been summoned to appear in Pittsburgh next week as witnesses in the income tax suit of Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury.

Both the Government, which says Mellon owes more than $3,000,000 in taxes and fraud penalties for his 1931 income, and the former Secretary, who is demanding a $139,000 rebate for the same year, announced they were ready to begin their cases on Monday.

Three members of the Board of Tax Appeals, Ernest H. Van Fossan, chairman, Charles Trammel and Bolan Turner, will hear the case, later submitting the evidence to other members in Washington for decision.

Grace Also to Testify.

In addition to Schwab, Mellon's chief attorney, Frank J. Hogan, of Washington, asked Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation; James A. Farrell, former president of United States Steel, and a host of others to appear.

The Bethlehem executives — Schwab is chairman of the Corporation—are expected to be key witnesses for Mellon's statement that he did not underlist profits on the sale of a large block of McClintic-Marshall stock to Bethlehem.

McClintic-Marshall is one of the country's largest construction firms. It built the huge steel locks for the Panama Canal, buying the steel from Bethlehem. Its stock was not listed on exchanges but was held mostly by four individuals, including Mellon.

The question of how much profit Mellon derived from the sale will require a series of technical sessions.

Different Set of Figures.

The Government and the defense will put forward entirely different sets of figures on progress of the McClintic-Marshall Co. from 1913, when income tax laws started, until the sale, in an attempt to show how much profit is involved.

The Government also says Mellon failed properly to enter the sale of $6,000,000 in Pittsburgh Coal and Western Public Service Co. stock. It charges the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh bought the stock and later sold it to a company owned by the Mellon family.

Heading the Government staff is Robert H. Jackson, general counsel for the income tax division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, until recently of Jamestown, N. Y., where he was attorney for the Hudson-Niagara Power Co. and other concerns. He is assisted by F. R. Shearer, E. L. Updike and D. R. Shelton, assistants in the tax appeals division.

CARDINAL CHARGES VIOLATION OF CONCORDAT BY GERMANY

Complaint Is an Outgrowth of Munich Plebiscite on State and Church Schools.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—Cardinal Michael Faulhaber of Munich, outspoken Nazi critic, has filed formal complaint concerning an alleged breach of article 23 of the concordat negotiated between Germany and the Vatican, it has been learned.

Article 23 of the concordat, which has not yet been ratified, deals with the Catholic Church's maintenance of its own schools. The complaint is an outgrowth of the recent plebiscite in Munich in which parents of schoool children chose between state and church schools.

Cardinal Faulhaber's secretary, Dr. Weissthanner, was jeered by young Nazis Wednesday night. When he protested he was taken to the police station. There he refused to surrender his portfolio, as ordered. He was released after two hours' detention.

By the Associated Press.

MUNICH, Feb. 16.—Attacks on Cardinal Faulhaber, including shouts of "Hang him," punctuated a rowdy Nazi German School League meeting last night. Schutz Staffel (picked Nazi guards) members, seized and took to police headquarters persons in the audience who took notes of the proceedings. The notes were confiscated. Rosters of the meeting warned that Jews would not be admitted. It was held on the scene of Adolf Hitler's 1923 beer cellar putsch.

Displays Skull of Sea Monster.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Feb. 16.—Tales of sea serpents revived here yesterday when the scallop schooner Elizabeth M., docked witn the skeleton head of some kind of marine monster. It was two feet long and a foot wide. It had two horns, two cavities for eyes four inches wide, two holes over the top of the head and a thoroughly strange nose, like a great hard button at the end of three triangular jointed pieces of bone.

MAN GETS LIFE FOR KILLING IN HOLDUP NETTING $1.03

Jack Meyers Will Be Given Insanity Hearing at Los Angeles Monday.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 16. — A jury that deliberated less than four hours convicted Jack Meyers, 32 years old, of first degree murder last night of the killing of John D. Vernon, 29, former Syracuse University student, of Jamestown, N. Y.

The jury recommended that Meyers, a former resident of Fort Wayne, Ind., be imprisoned for life. The robbery of Vernon netted him $1.03. Meyers pleaded not guilty and not guilty by reason of insanity. He will be given a sanity hearing Monday.

Detectives had testified that Meyers confessed beating Vernon in order to rob him last Sept. 17. They said he told of seeing Vernon on a street intoxicated, following him to his hotel room and slugging him. He was found dead, on the bed the next day.

OUTFIELDER WEST SIGNS; 6 BROWNIES OUT OF FOLD

By J. Roy Stockton.

Sammy West, Brownie center fielder and one of the best flychasers in the business, has signed his 1935 contract, Vice-President L. C. McElroy announced today and only six members of the St. Louis American League club now are out of the fold. Players whose signed contracts have not yet been received are George Blaeholder, Jack Burns, Frank Grube, Harland Clift, Elton Wiggs and Ashley Hillin.

West, in a letter that accompanied his contract, said he would drive to St. Louis in a few days from his home in Rule, Tex., and depart by train for West Palm Beach, where he is due to report March 5. Sam is one of four members who will form the second squad of Brownies. The others are Oscar Melillo, Ray Pepper and Burns.

Last season, West was Hornsby's leading batter, the Texan finishing the year with a mark of .326, 17 points ahead of Ralston Burnley, who was among the nine leading hitters during the three stages of the pennant race. West suffered a fractured knee cap in the 1934 season, in a collision with the fence at Washington. He played for a few days before the extent of the injury was determined. The fracture was not serious one and the Browns have assured that Sam will be as good as ever.

Pat Malone and Joe Medwick now are the only players whose status can be said to perturb the Cardinal officials. Ernie Orsatti also is said to be dissatisfied with the terms offer, but he was of the second last year and finally consented and negotiations with the little Italian probably will be referred until he arrives at Bradenton.

According to the best available information, the club will invite Orsatti to come to St. Louis for a conference. He has been training at Hot Springs, and as has been his wont, wants a contract calling for $10,000 salary he received from the Cubs last season. The Cardinals have offered $5000.

The Cardinals are delaying release of their spring training rosters pending the closing of negotiations for exhibition games on the way home from Bradenton. If the Cardinals decide to operate a club at Montgomery, they will book an exhibition game there. Also there are several players whose status has not been determined definitely. Most of the athletes now listed for duty at Bradenton may be taken off the list if there is any controversy over contracts.

Medwick Asks $2500 More Than Cardinals Have Offered Him

By the Associated Press.

CARTERET, N. J., Feb. 16.—Joe Medwick, one of the better known baseball holdouts, expects 1935 to be a good year for both himself and the St. Louis Cardinals and "wouldn't be surprised" if he became the National League's champion batter.

"I should have a good season," the husky Cardinal outfielder said yesterday. "I know more about the game than I did last year, I know more about the pitchers and the parks and I'm ready for a great year. As a matter of fact, I wouldn't be surprised if I led the league in hitting."

Considering Joe's 1934 record, such a feat isn't so hard to imagine. He finished the year—his first full season in the major leagues—with a healthy average of .320 and was one of the league's best in slugging.

Contract $2500 Short.

Young Medwick, incidentally, is anxious to trek toward the Southland, but he's going to wait here at home until he's satisfied with the figures behind the dollar sign in the contract offered him by St. Louis. He received one contract this week, but he air-mailed it back to Branch Rickey with a P. S. to the effect it wasn't satisfactory.

"It was about $2500 short," Joe said, "of what I want to play ball this year. I shot it back and expect to hear from the boss again next week."

Medwick declined to say what the Cards did offer. It's not a secret, however, that he intended to ask for $10,000, which would mean contract No. 1 suggested that he take his place in left field for approximately $7500.

Cards Will Win Again.

Getting back to the 1935 campaign, Medwick said he expected a "good race, but, naturally, we're going to win." He said the other teams in the league would be "all tough this year and there's no kidding about that."

"But with Dizzy Dean and the same young club with which we finished the season last year back, the Cards ought to be way up front before the end of the year," Joe predicted. "It won't be like last year; I don't think there'll ever again be a finish like the one we put on to win the pennant and the world series in 1934."

"GENERAL ALVIN CROWDER, Detroit Tiger hurler, passed judgment yesterday on the pitching Dean brothers.

"Paul doesn't talk so much—and is as good as he talks."

TULSA SCORES EIGHT POINTS IN 5 MINUTES TO BEAT BEARS

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., Feb. 16.—The University of Tulsa basketeers put on a rousing drive in the last five minutes of play here last night to break a neck-and-neck battle with the Washington Bears of St. Louis and score a 27 to 19 victory over their Missouri Valley rivals.

Martinoni, Washington center, connected with a long, side-court shot to tie the score at 19-all, but shortly afterwards he was ejected from the game for excessive fouling and the Bears were unable to make another point. Larson, Moorman and Kilpatrick led the belated attack which allowed Tulsa to finish with a comfortable lead.

Washington held a 12-11 advantage at half time but Parker and Kilpatrick made two quick baskets when the second half opened, and the Tulsans were never again behind.

Long Shots Help Bears.

Long shots by Hudgens and Martintoni kept the Bears ahead during the blistering first half, but Tulsa rallied just before the intermission to bucket two field goals and draw up to a count of 11 to 12.

Woodie Estel, Tulsa guard, was knocked kicking in a wild mixup shortly before the intermission. He was struck in the eye by a flying elbow and sent crashing to the floor. Harry Parker, his substitute, slipped in to cage a field goal as the second half opened and Kilpatrick took a neat bounce pass from Parker to shoot the Tulsans

WRAY'S COLUMN

Dempsey Gets the Air.

JACK DEMPSEY, having had about everything else that comes to man on earth, will now get the air. That is to say, he will tease the mike. Tonight, over KSD, according to a telegram from Jack, he will broadcast a dramatization of his fight with Fred Fulton, then a "logical contender for the championship."

That ought not to tire the public. The fight in question, which took place in 1918 before Dempsey was champion and while Fulton was still hopeful of becoming one, lasted just 18 seconds — eight for the fight and 10 for the count. After Fulton was recognized for what he had always been—just a six-foot, four-inch section of Gorgonzola.

Not much to dramatize there. The well known two blows constituted the entire fight. Jack hit Fred—Fred hit the floor. But had Fulton not fought Dempsey he might have had a match with Willard. Against Jess he might have had a bit of luck and won the title. The Dempsey fight practically ruined Fulton's career.

Dempsey.

• • •

Fulton Had a Complex.

THIS writer knew Fulton well and saw several of his fights. In all of them Fulton displayed a complex but for which he might really have been successful in gaining the title—but not against Dempsey, please.

Fulton had power. He had a left arm of enormous length. When warmed up he could use it well. But there was a fatal defect about Fulton. The first minute of his fight was agony for him. He never came into the ring mentally tuned up to a fight. His morale was always down and his efficiency still lower. It was in these early moments of his battles that second raters like Harry Tate, Tom Cowler and others tagged him and all but flattened him.

Any time Fulton got past the first round of a fight he was pretty good, although he never owned a fighting heart worthy of a humming bird. But he did gain a certain measure of confidence as his fights progressed.

In his battle here with that whisky hound, Tom Cowler, after being mopped all over the ring for the first round, he managed to get going and beat Cowler by a knockout.

In his return fight with Harry

Chuck Klein and English Sign Bruin Contracts

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16. — Charles Herbert (Chuck) Klein and Elwood (Woody) English, who have been acting like holdouts, even though not classed as such by the club, came to terms with the Cubs yesterday.

English ..gned his contract. Klein wired owner Phil K. Wrigley from his home in Indianapolis that he was ready to put his signed document in the mail. English will again serve as field captain, which provides for a $100 a month bonus.

Klein, who was the National League's champion hitter before he was sold by Philadelphia to the Cubs for a reported $125,000 after the 1933 season, had a poor season last year, took a slice from the $25,000 he was reported to have received for his first year with the Cubs.

O'DOUL NAMED LEADER OF THE FRISCO CLUB

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16.—Frank "Lefty" O'Doul was named manager of the San Francisco Seals baseball team today by Presndent Charles Graham immediately after word of his release by the New York Giants was received here.

In becoming manager of the Coast League club here, O'Doul returns to the team upon which he broke into baseball. He joined the Seals in 1917 as a pitcher. He succeeds Jimmy "Ike" Caveney, manager for the last three years.

HANK O'DAY RALLIES; STILL SERIOUSLY ILL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Hank O'Day, former National League umpire, rallied sharply from his illness at the Presbyterian Hospital today, but his condition still was very serious.

O'Day, now 75 years old, is suffering from a general run-down condition and stomach trouble.

LESLIE SIGNS DODGER CONTRACT FOR 1935

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The Brooklyn baseball Dodgers today announced the receipt of a signed contract from Big Sam Leslie, heavy-hitting first baseman. Leslie hit .332 and fielded .993 last season.

BLACK HAWK KID GAINS TITLE IN U. S. AMATEUR BIRD DOG TRIAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

STURGEON, Mo., Feb. 16.—Black Hawk Kid, a three-year-old setter owned by Carl Duffield of Tulsa, Ok., today won the national quail championship field trials for bird dogs held here. Duffield is president-elect of the Associated Amateur Field Trial Clubs of America, which is sponsoring the meet here.

General Jackson Jr., owned by Dr. F. J. Boyd of Cincinnati, was the runner-up.

The two dogs were selected out of a field of 26 which competed in the event.

The new champion succeeds Shanghai Express.

The weather was raw and cloudy yesterday and little was done on the part of the six dogs that ran to change the standing of the stake up to this time. Chances So-Big, owned and handled by T. J. Krisko of Binghamton, N. Y., ran against Genial Host Jr., owned and handled by Dr. P. K. Phillips of Cincinnati, O., but their attempt to wrest the title from the others resulted in each dog finding but one bevy each. Bacon Rind, a pointer, owned by C. S. Proctor of Oklahoma City, Ok., came next. His brace mate was withdrawn and he ran alone, but he likewise failed in the attempt. In the afternoon, Nepken Sport, owned by Jay F. Carlisle of East Islip, N. Y., ran against Caesar's Ramona, a diminutive setter owned by E. W. Heisey of Newark, O., and while both ran interesting heats, it is not likely that they will figure in the final summing up.

West to Box Salvia.

Herman West, a Southern Illinois Golden Gloves light-heavyweight champion, and Tony Salvia, from Sherman Park, will meet in one of the 12 bouts on Benny Kessler's amateur boxing show next Friday night at the Coliseum. Kessler announced the closing of the match yesterday.

SHANNON WILL BE IN EAGLES' LINEUP TONIGHT

PROBABLE LINEUPS

EAGLES.	Pos.	BRUINS.
Beveridge	Goal	Thompson
Ayers	L. D.	Seibert
Frew	R.D.	Shore
Voss	C.	Kaminsky
Ripley	L.W.	Barry
Brydson	R.W.	Clapper

Starting time, 8:45 o'clock.

Spares: Bruins—McInenly, Sands, Stewart, Davie, Beattie, O'Neil, Jerwa, Haynes and Shill. Eagles—Graham, Eddie Finnigan, Cowley, Shannon, Asmundson, Lamb, Kelley and Purpur.

By W. J. McGoogan.

Those bruising Bruins from Boston, only two points behind first place in the American Division of the National Hockey League, will oppose the St. Louis Eagles at the Arena tonight.

It will be the fifth meeting of the season between the clubs and the Eagles have yet to gain a point in competition with the Bruins. The previous four contests have all resulted in victories for Boston.

Joe Lamb, center forward, who has been out of the St. Louis lineup for quite a while, expects to return to the game as the cracked bone in his arm has healed sufficiently to permit him to play.

Also Jerry Shannon, whom the Eagles sent to Boston for Frank Jerwa, will change sweaters before the game, Jerwa returning to the Bruins and Shannon coming back to the Eagles.

Boston, it is said, would be willing to trade the men even up but since the departure of Syd Howe the Eagles are more in need of left wings than right wings. Shannon is a left wing so he will fit into the first Eagle line with Voss at center and Brydson right wing to restore that trio to something like its former effectiveness.

Another recovery is Vernon Ayers, big defense man who missed the Ranger game because of a bad cold. He will be back in the lineup tonight.

All these changes probably will change the Eagles from the placid, futile outfit they were against the Rangers to something like their former battling selves.

The Bruins, of course, are a formidable array with Tiny Thompson in goal and Eddie Shore at defense.

Max Kaminsky, former Eagle, who has played center on the first Boston line since being traded to the Bruins, has continued to star with the club with Marty Barry at one wing and Dit Clapper at the other.

The game will mark the last appearance of Boston here this season.

JAPAN SEEKS U. S. SUPPORT IN EFFORT TO LAND OLYMPICS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Japan has asked American support in its campaign to hold the 1940 Olympic Games in Tokio, and has acquired a fund of 1,000,000 yen, presumably to be used in helping cover traveling expenses of European teams to the Far East, Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic Association said yesterday.

He said he had not given the request for support of the Japanese bid consideration, but thought the United States, which "has very friendly athletic relations with Japan," would be favorable.

Cunningham, Bonthron and Venzke in Second Meeting; Hornbostel Favored in 880

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Cunningham, Bothron and Venzke will be doing business at the same old stand tonight. These three aces of America's distance runners will meet for the second time this indoor season in the Baxter mile, prime fixture of the New York A. C. games in Madison Square Garden. Another capacity crowd, such as packed the Garden to see Cunningham beat Venzke by six yards and Bonthron by twenty-five in the Wanamaker mile of the Millrose games, is assured.

Kansas Glenn, world's record holder for the mile, indoors and out, rules a decided favorite on the basis of his 4:11 clocking in the Wanamaker mile but the track-wise customers expect a much closer finish this time. Bonthron's failure in the Millrose apparently was due to over-training. Bill has been rating himself along carefully this time to make sure he will have his dreaded finishing sprint. Venzke's smashing race in the Wanamaker when he led Bonthron home for the first time in his career and his brilliant victory in the Hunter mile of the Boston A. A. games are ample indication Gene, the gallery favorite, will give his two main rivals all the competition they can handle.

Incidentally it was in the Baxter mile of other years that both Bonthron and Venzke scored epic victories. In 1932, Venzke won it in 4:10, setting what then was a new world's record, indoors, for the mile. That time still stands as the fastest in the history of the event. Last year Bonthron's mad dash to the tape nipped Cunningham by inches with Venzke only a stride or two behind in perhaps the closest finish the Baxter ever has seen.

Sharing interest with the mile classic in which Eric Ny of Sweden and Harry Williamson of North Carolina will be the other starters, is the Halpin 880 with Chuck Hornbostel of Indiana the "hot" choice; the shot put where Huge Jack Torrance of Louisiana State will go after Leo Sexton's world's indoor standard of 52 feet 8¾ inches; the pole vault, with Keith Brown of Yale aiming at lifting his own indoor standard of 14 feet 4 inches; the high jump where Cornelius Johnson of California and George Spitz both have hopes of surpassing Walter Marty's record of 6 feet 8¾ inches; the two-mile run, a three-cornered battle among Ray Sears of Butler and Joe McCluskey and John W. (Bill) Follows, of the New York A. C.

Earl Widmyer of Maryland, Ben Johnson and Sam Maniaci of Columbia and Eulace Peacock are leading rivals in the 60-yard sprint; while Percy Beard and Ivan Fuqua seem to dominate the fields in the 60-yard high hurdles and the Buermyer 500 respectively.

TWENTY GRAND ENTERED IN GOOD FIELD MONDAY

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.—Twenty Grand, one of the truly greats of the American turf, today was nominated for a race at the Santa Anita track next Monday, in which he will be pitted against several outstading contenders in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, Feb. 23.

The race, over a mile and one-sixteenth, will bring to the post such horses as Equipoise, Sweeping Light, Ladysman, Sarada, Gusto and Mr. Khayyam.

KIRKSVILLE LOST $950 ON FOOTBALL SEASON

By the Associated Press.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., Feb. 16.—Although the Kirksville Teachers won eight straight games and their seventh Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship in nine years, the 1934 football season resulted in a $950 loss to the athletic department. Kirksville's financially successful 1933 season, however, helped balance the department's budget.

Dutra, Laffoon Tie for Lead in Phoenix Tourney

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 16.—Sub par rounds of 69 were turned in yesterday by Mortie Dutra, winter pro at Chandler, Ariz., and Ky Laffoon of Chicago, to give them a tie for the lead at the end of the first day's play in the Phoenix open golf tournament.

Both fairly burned up the fairways to finish two under perfect figures for the local course.

A one-under-par round of 70 gave Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore., undisputed possession of third place, where he was closely followed by Craig Wood, Deal, N. J., with a 71, even par.

Dutra, Laffoon, Zimmerman and Wood are the only ones in the army of professionals to give par a beating as they stopped off here en route home after the winter tournaments in California.

Co-leaders for the day at least, Dutra and Laffoon included in their fine cards four birdies apiece, the last for each coming on the long 540-yard eighteenth.

Laffoon holed a perfect chip shot on the eighteenth to get his 69, while Dutra, playing in a foursome right behind the Chicagoan, stroked in a 22-footer to make it a two-way tie.

Orville White of St. Louis had 76 for the first round.

FIELD OF 21 WILL BE CUT DOWN; OPEN RACE LIKELY

Cavalcade Due For a Workout at Santa Anita Track

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.

THE question of whether Cavalcade will start in the Santa Anita $100,000 handicap here a week hence may be answered today.

Off the track for almost three weeks due to an infection in the right front hoof, the Kentucky Derby winner of 1934 is slated for a test today with a racing plate on the injured foot.

If Trainer Bob Smith decides Mrs. Dodge Sloane's famous charger can stand the shoe he still has a chance of running in the rich stake.

"We won't take a chance on injuring the horse for $100,000," said Smith, however. "We don't need the money that bad. Cavalcade will be right or he won't run."

Smith said the lameness had gone from the leg.

Mrs. Sloane is due here Sunday and her word on whether Cavalcade goes will be final.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 16.—The finest array of young thoroughbreds ever to grace a Western track will be called to the post today for the Santa Anita Derby and its $20,000 added money.

While the overnight entry list of 21 was expected to be pared down before post time to approximately a dozen, the result of the mile and sixteenth race was expected to have an important bearing on the Kentucky Derby two months hence.

Nominations for the annual Churchill Downs classics were expected to include a goodly share of today's starters.

Open Race Expected.

The Catawba Stable entry of Sound Advice and Polar Flight was an odds on favorite on the morning line but a wide-open race was in prospect. They have acquitted themselves in noble fashion on the local turf, each winning two spring races.

The young thoroughbreds from the stables of the Whitneys were well liked. Mrs. Payne Whitney was expected to send the entry of Peradventure, a game filly with Silvio Coucci up, and Gillie to the barrier.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney had Pantoufle and Pundit for an entry. There was some question as to whether Gillie and Pundit would be among the starters.

Peradventure will have a five-pound advantage over the colts and gelding in the same range. The same was the case of Pantoufle, another filly, with Alvin Robertson in the boot. Each has shown stretch running ability in the shorter races here but have lacked the speed of Sound Advice and Polar Flight.

There was a Western entry threat in Norman Church's North-away Stable pair—Toro Nancy and Toro Flight. Toro Nancy earned a reputation for herself at Chicago last year, winning the Arlington Futurity.

Entry from East.

The East boasted another strong starter in Peter Pat of the Belair stud. Like Peradventure and Pantoufle, he has been at his best in the longer races here. The Milky Way Farm entry also was a threat with Whiskolo, piloted by Jack Westrope.

With $20,000 in added money and a large field expected, the winner probably will earn in the neighborhood of that figure. Second place horse receives $4000; third place $2000 and fourth, $1000.

$25,000 HANDICAP TO BE RUN ON MARCH 23

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16.—The Bay Meadows Handicap, richest stake race of the spring meeting open at the Bay Meadows track, will be run March 23, General Manager William P. Kyne announced yesterday.

Decision to hold the not-less-than $25,000 added mile and one-eighth feature early in the meeting was made in order to attract as many as possible of the outstanding horses now racing at Santa Anita track near Los Angeles. The Bay Meadows meeting will open March 12, immediately after the close of Santa Anita.

The race will be for three-year-olds and up.

Kyne said he had been advised Time Supply, winner of the first Bay Meadows' Handicap last fall, would be entered.

By Harold Tuthill.

McKinley, although idle, became the leader in the City High School League basketball race, when Beaumont was knocked out of first place by Central, 27 to 21, yesterday afternoon on the Bethany court. In the other contest, Roosevelt moved out of the cellar by outlasting Blewett, 24 to 22, on the Roosevelt floor.

Before the Blue Jackets encountered Central, they had mowed down four opponents in order and were well on their way to another title. McKinley finished its campaign Thursday with a record of five victories and one defeat, so it is by the narrow margin of half a game that the Goldbugs rest in first place.

There were some who said that Central played better than it knew how—that it was an inspired team. Certainly the five regulars played Beaumont to a 5 to 5 deadlock after the first eight minutes. The Blue Jackets felt that they were sure to leave the floor with a one point lead at the half when Herb Kamper counted from scrimmage to put them out in front, 9 to 8. However, in the last 10 seconds Art Kerls fouled Herman "Red" Wulfemeyer, who missed the first, but made the second try good, to tie the score at 9-all.

At the beginning of the second half, three field goals, one each by Wulfemeyer, Armin "Bud" Stelzer and Martin Hughes, turned the tide in Central's favor. Bob Gerst revived the Blue Jackets' hopes with a free throw, but that was the only point they recorded in the third period. Reinhold Zeidler's field goal and free throw and Wulfemeyer's second field goal enabled Central to lead, 20 to 10, going into the last period. Try as they might, the Blue Jackets never reached within tying distance in the final eight minutes.

A change also was made in the lower half of the standings. Roosevelt and Blewett had been tied for the cellar position, but the Rough Riders vacated by registering their first victory in five starts. Blewett, who is fast becoming known as a slow starter and rushing finisher, just fell short of a tie.

The league season will close next week.

The ears kept plugging away until Martitoni deadlocked the score, but he took their hopes away on his broad shoulders when he left the court.

Washington guarded Herbie Larson, Tulsa's star forward and leading Missouri Valley scorer, zealously and held him to seven points, three of which were made on free throws. In previous games he had averaged slightly more than 10 points a contest.

53 Fouls Called as Celtics Defeat Rens, 50-41; 3300 Attend

By James M. Gould

In a slam-bang game in which the slams and the bangs far outnumbered the flashes of good basketball play, the Celtics defeated the Renaissance team in their series for the pro championship, 50 to 41, before 3300 persons at the Coliseum. Except for the long and accurate shooting, better basketball has been played here. But, it was a busy evening including as it did 27 field goals, 37 successful free throws and 53 fouls.

Technically perhaps, Referee Nyikos was within his rights in calling so many fouls, but the general idea was that these players were professionals, the crowd had come to see a professional show and if the men wanted to rough it up, why not let them do so? They were rough enough as it was, and had the game been played under college rules, the Celtics would have lost all five of their starters by personals, while three of the Rens would have been banished.

The fouling started with the game and finally the centers both were being penalized on almost every tip-off. Naturally, this served to slow up the action. An early lead of the Rens was nullified by a Celtic spurt. Then, the score was tied five times, all in the first two quarters. Though pressed at times, the Celtics never were headed in the second half.

None of the Rens went into double figures in the scoring, while, for the Celtics, Banks had 12 points and Hickey, Herlihy and Lapchick each accounted for 11.

Celtics Lead at the Half.

The Rens ran the score to 7—1 at the start of the game and the Celtics then held their opponents scoreless while they counted 10 points to take the lead. The accuracy of the Rens' passing and shotting, however, made it close all the way, and, at the end of the first quarter, the colored team led, 13 to 12. The second quarter saw the Celtics gather 11 points while the Rens could collect only six—one field goal and four free throws—and the Irish were up, 23—19, at the end of the half.

It was ding-dong and foul-foul in the final two quarters. In the third quarter, Hickey, Celtic forward, made the most sensational basket of the evening when he sank one from mid-floor, the ball going cleanly through the net.

In this third quarter, the teams weer about on a scoring par with the Celtics scoring 10 points and the Rens, 11. It was in the final quarter that the Celtics breezed away and, by various methods, counted 17 points while the consistent Rens were held to 11.

It was the tenth game of the season between the two teams. Including last night's game, each has won five. They play tonight in Kansas City.

The game was variously advertised to start at 8:30 and 9:00 p. m. It actually got under way at 9:17 after the crowd had showed considerable impatience.

The progressive score:

In last year's St. Louis game between the two, "only" 46 fouls were committeed, Banks, Celtic guard, getting 13. Last night, he was much more conservative, being charged with only four. Herlihy and Lapchick, with nine and Cooper with seven were "high" in this respect.

The Rens were the better passers while the Celtics were far superior in guarding tactics though very "wrestler-like" at times.

That spectacular passing of the Rens were more or less conspicuous by its absence last night. The Celts didn't give them time for much fancy-work.

Ordinarily, pro basketball games are not divided into quarters. Last night, however, the "quarter-rule" was adopted at the request of the Celtics whose squad consists of only six men. The score by quarters was:

Celtics	12	11	10	17—50

Owens Wins Four Firsts as Buckeyes Take Track Meet

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Feb. 16.—Ohio State's sensational colored track ace, Jessie Owens, paced the Buckeyes to a 68 to 36 victory over Illinois last night. Owens won four events—the 60-yard dash, broad jump, 70-yard high hurdles, and 75-yard low hurdles—as he established two new Armory records.

Owens eclipsed his own American indoor broad jump mark by seven inches with a 25 foot 10¼ inch leap but fouled by ¼-inch in the attempt. He won the event with a 25 foot 2 inch effort, establishing a new Armory mark. The Ohio State star also set up a new local record in the 60 yard dash with a 6.3 race.

Slightly fewer than 3000 persons overflowed all bleacher space at the only home indoor meet for the Illini.

Illinois athletes were able to annex only two first places during the evening, both in thrilling neck-and-neck finishes. Lynn Baughman took the lead at the start of the last lap of the 880-yard run and successfully warded off Cliff Smith's challenge in the last 20 yards. Jack Dufresne took the lead in the last 30 yards of the two mile run and stretched his lead over Huffman of Ohio State to five yards at the finish.

In an exhibition 60 meter race, Bob Grieve, Illini sophomore who is ineligible, defeated Hunter Russell, big ten 100 yard champion last year. Grieve's time of 6.7 equalled Ralph Metcalfe's world record.

PRINCIPIA COLLEGE OPPOSES MOBERLY

The Principia College basketball five will entertain the Moberly Junior College team in a game at Howard Gym starting at 8:30 o'clock tonight. This will be a Missouri State Junior College Conference contest. The Principia Academy A squad will oppose the John Burroughs School five in an ABC League contest at 7:30 o'clock.

GRANITE CITY IS VICTOR, RETAINS EAST SIDE LEAD

Granite City's Happy Warriors continue to set the pace in the Madison-St. Clair High School basketball conference due to a 35-to-24 victory over Wood River's Oilers last night. Collinsville defeated East St. Louis, to remain in second place, 40 to 24, while Belleville lost to Alton, 20 to 16. Edwardsville defeated Heath High of Paducah, Ky., 29 to 21, with Madison turning back Cleveland, 48 to 23, in non-league games.

Granite City's defeat of Wood River was expected and the Happy Warriors retained their half-game lead over Collinsville.

Led by the offensive punch of Claude Beeler rangy Granite City pivot man, the Oilers were outplayed throughout. Beeler accounted for 16 of the victors' points. Clark, Wood River guard, was high scorer for the losers with a total of 10 points.

Three games are scheduled for tonight. Granite City is expected to retain its lead with a victory over Belleville's Maroons, at Belleville. Madison is at East St. Louis and Wood River host to Alton.

NO SUSPENSION FOR SKATERS WHO FAILED TO RACE AT ARENA

After a two-hour session last night at the Arena, the board of control of the Missouri Skating Association issued a statement that no action was taken by the board to jeopardize the status of the skaters from the Winter Garden Skating Club who failed to participate in the opening of the second half of the city championship series at the Arena.

A committee composed of E. J. Wallace, Phil McGrath, and Art Willow was named to confer with F. D. McDonald Jr., manager of the Winter Garden this afternoon in an effort to bring harmonious relations between his rink and the Arena.

McDonald ordered his skaters not to appear in the Arena races, contending that he had a promise from Henry Kemper, president of the State association, now in Norway, that the second half of the championship races would be held at the Garden.

The board reaffirmed its sanction of Sept. 28 to the Arena to hold all the city championship events at the Arena.

The board voted to suspend any amateur skater who takes part in the pro racing program at the Winter Garden tomorrow night, the rules of the Amateur Skating Union of the United States, of which the State association is a member, prohibiting an amateur skater from appearing on any professional program.

C. B. C. FIVE WINS PREP LEAGUE TITLE; BEATS ST. L. U. HIGH

Christian Brothers High School's basketball team became the champions of the Preparatory League last night by winning a close game from the St. Louis University High five, 22-19. It was the first undisputed championship for the C. B. C team.

The Brothers took a lead in the second period and kept ahead of the Junior Billikens by a small margin throughout the remainder of the contest.

In preliminary games, the "B" team of St. Louis U. High beat the C. B. C. "B" squad, 17-16, while the "C" team of C. B. C. won from the Junior Billikens "C" squad, 11-4.

What Might Have Been.

IN one campaign it really appeared as though he were the best available man to fight Willard. Had he done so Willard's slowness and long absence from the ring might have made him a shining mark for Fulton—provided Fulton survived the first round.

But—along came Dempsey and whichever of the several managers who had Fulton tied up at this period sanctioned the match with Dempsey certainly did not know Dempsey or Fulton either.

At no stage of his career or fighting adventure would Fulton have had a chance with Dempsey. And it was just as well for the world, subsequent events proved, that Fulton was shoved out of the picture by Jack in that elimination bout. For Fulton later admitted faking with a third-rate heavy named Fuente. In other ways showed himself unfitted to support with dignity and ability a championship honor.

Had Fulton had Willard's gameness he might have been a pugilistic factor. At it was he got exactly what was coming to him—18 seconds with a real champion.

The First Big Derby.

THE Santa Anita $100,000 handicap has cast a shadow over all the usual winter and spring turf fixtures. The Kentucky Derby has come in for scant attention because of the remarkable field assembled at Santa Anita race track for the event of Feb. 23. Even the $20,000 Santa Anita Derby, scheduled today, failed to attract notice, despite a good field.

Another of the interesting early races of the year to escape real notice is the Florida, to be run at Hialeah in a few weeks. This race usually contributes a few candidates of merit to the Kentucky Derby, which this year will be run May 4. Only one Florida Derby winner has ever even figured in the money in a Kentucky Derby and that was Charley O., who ran third in the Churchill Downs classic.

Sex Against Her Chances.

This year one of the sensations of the two-year-old campaign is eligible to both the Florida and Kentucky derbies. Unfortunately she is a filly and we all know what happens to fillies when they try to win the Kentucky event. This miss is Black Helen, winner of race after race as a juvenile until late in the season when she either went stale or else found the longer races too much for her endurance. She has been installed one of the early favorites in this Florida event at 6 to 1, but she has yet to show her fitness for the race.

On the other hand the co-favorite in the future book with Black Helen, Roman Soldier, has been to the races three times as a three-year-old and has won twice impressively. He starts again today at Hialeah. The son of Cohort is a sturdy fellow and gave promise as a two-year-old. In 12 starts he won five times, was second four times and third once.

Because of his sex Roman Soldier has a better chance of standing up in the Kentucky Derby than Black Helen, Bradley's filly. Roman Soldier will also get a crack at another derby before he tries the Kentucky. That will be at Arlington Downs, in the $15,000 Texas Derby. William Sachsenmaier, owner of Roman Soldier, is especially interested in this race, which he won last year with Plight.

Marathon Skaters Must Circle Winter Garden Track 419 Times

By Harry McKanna.

Paul (Pop) Boudreau, Schenectady, N. Y. endurance skater thinks that he stands a good chance of winning the skating marathon at the Winter Garden, tomorrow night, although he will be pitted against some of the fastest professional speed skaters in the country.

Boudreau, who with Ray Strodel of Syracuse, another entrant, arrived yesterday for the 26-mile-385-yard race, established an unofficial American endurance mark, having skated for 19 consecutive hours at Schenectady four years ago.

"I think I have as much stamina today as when I set the mark," Boudreau said, "and I will give those fast skaters plenty to do to keep me from winning the race. It is much easier to skate indoors than outside. I believe I could skate for at least 36 straight hours, side.

"When I skated 19 hours I started out when the temperature was zero and when I finished it was 12 below. I had to skate against a strong wind, a handicap you do not meet indoors. I had a foot and a hand frozen, and they had to build a fire on the ice to thaw me out."

Rodgers May Not Compete.

Ben Blanke, promoter, said all of the entrants with the possible exception of Tony Rodgers of Cleveland, would be in the city by tonight. Rodgers suffered a sprained ankle recently and doubted whether he would be able to skate here.

The skaters were to work out at the rink late today after engineers have laid out the track which will be 16 laps to a mile. In order to finish in the race a skater will have to circle the track 419½ times.

Blanke announced that the entertainment program would precede the race. It will include figure and stunt skating. The race will start around 9 p. m. and last about 90 minutes.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 16.—Maxie Rosenbloom, former world light heavyweight champion, New York, won a decision over Bob Godwin of Florida in a 10-round bout here last night. It was their seventh meeting. Rosenbloom weighed 181 pounds, nine more than his opponent.

JENNINGS WINS BY 11 POINTS; U. CITY QUINT INCREASES LEAD

University City High School's basketball team turned back the challenge of Webster Groves' five last night and by its 28-24 victory earned in the final minutes of the game, increased its lead in the Suburban League and now has only a weak Kirkwood team to defeat to win the championship.

In the County League, Jennings defeated Valley Park, hitherto unbeaten, 34-23, to put those two teams and Ferguson in a three-way tie for first place. The tie will probably exist after the regular season is concluded, for all three teams meet weak opposition in their final contests.

University City and Webster were trying too hard last night, and as a result were racing up and down the floor with much effort but little result in the way of baskets. A total of 26 fouls was called and many more were committed but escaped detection.

The Indians led throughout the first half, holding a 12-9 edge at the half, and continued to lead at the end of the third period, 19-18. But in the first minute of the last quarter, Jim Heiter and Dick Kohlman scored baskets to give Webster a 22-19 lead. Multin made a free throw, and then Dick Yore came through with two baskets, a long shot and a one-hand throw that let the Indians take a 24-22 lead.

Ruengert, substitute for Webster, tied the score with two minutes to go, but Multin made go on a follow up shot and then McConnell sank two free throws to end the scoring.

Other Suburban League games resulted in victories for Clayton, 50-31, over Wellston; Maplewood, 28-23 over Kirkwood, and St. Charles 32-26 over Ritenour.

In the County League, Ferguson whipped Hancock, 38-23, Bayless won from Eureka, 38-35; Fairview beat Brentwood, 20-9, and Riverview Gardens scored its first victory of the year, defeating Affton 31-23.

George Tuthill led the scorers of the games played last night, sinking 11 field goals for 22 points. Mustion of Eureka with 17 and Lammers of St. Charles with 15 were the next high scorers.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 16.—Scoring freely, Minneapolis of the Central League romped over the St. Louis of the American Association, 4 to 2, in a hockey game here last night.

The Millers opened the scoring in the first period when they tallied twice, one of them an unearned shot. LaFrance and Cox put on a neat exhibition of teamwork to score the first one while Breckheimer was credited with the second, when his shot, apparently wide of the net, hit Goalie Murray's stick and bounced in.

With both teams coasting in the second period, play was slow but the third period brought numerous penalties and four goals, two by each team. Paddy Padden gave the Flyers their first goal when Stark was drawn out of the net, but it was only 10 seconds later that Scotvold teamed with Bartholome to give the Millers another goal. Wasnie and Shea teamed on the next Miller counter, while P. Palangio came in hard to score unassisted at 14:09 while the Millers were short handed.

ILLINOIS PLAYS PURDUE IN BIG TEN FEATURE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Purdue and Indiana, tied for the Western Conference basketball lead, tonight meet their lone Big Ten conquerors of the season with more than revenge to spur them on. Purdue opposes Illinois at Lafayette, Ind., and Indiana meets Wisconsin at Madison. The only other conference game sends Michigan to Iowa. Northwestern, steel reeling from seven trimmings in its last eight games, plays at Marquette.

Michigan Wins Meet.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 16.—A great University of Michigan track team invaded the Field House at the University of Minnesota last night to easily defeat the Gophers by a 57-to-28 score. Michigan captured first places in eight of the ten events and had a good sprinkling of seconds and thirds to build up its margin.

HELPFUL TIPS ABOUT BILLIARDS by C. A. STORER

No. 5—Follow Shot.

In executing the follow shot, one must first know how to determine where the cue ball should strike the first object ball in order that it will travel accurately to the second object ball. (See diagram No. 8.)

Note shot "A." First draw an imaginary line from the inside center of the two object balls. This is indicated here by the dotted line. After finding the point of contact of this line on the first object ball, then determine the point of contact on the first object ball with the cue ball, by making the center of the cue ball strike the first ball as though you were trying to hit the spot on the far side as indicated by the dotted line. In other words, aim the center of the cue ball directly at the end of the dotted line on the far side of the first object ball; hit the cue ball just about half the width of your tip above center.

Now try shot "B" on this same diagram. Note the difference where you strike the first object ball. While shot "B" is really not a follow shot, it is shown here to prove how useful it will be to you to know how to determine where to hit an object ball in the different variations of the follow shot.

The first few times you try this, you may miss because you are concentrating too much on that one point. After practicing this method of finding the correct place to hit the first object ball, it will eventually become naturable.

CHAMPION BAER GAINS DECISION IN POREDA BOUT

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16.—Max Baer did everything but stick out his tongue or knock out Stanley Poreda of New Jersey as he paid off a debt to Mrs. Elsie Camilli in a four-round boxing match here last night.

Net receipts of close to $15,000 went to Mrs. Camilli, widow of Frankie Campbell who died after a fight with Baer here in 1930. The heavyweight champion donated his services, a lot of clowning and one hearty right hand drive that floored the unconditioned Poreda for a nine count in the final round.

In return he got the thanks of Mrs. Camilli and a bloody nose, the bloody nose was Poreda's one effective contribution.

The playboy champion could obviously have knocked out his opponent at any stage of the fight if he chose, but he preferred to play at being groggy himself and demonstrating a little of everything he had in the way of swings and clowning.

Baer weighed 213 and Poreda 217 pounds.

After the main event Babe Marino, San Francisco middleweight, twice floored Andy Callahan and smashed the Boston southpaw about the ring for 10 rounds to win a decision. Marino weighed 152, Callahan 145.

GOLDEN MILLER GAINS 10-LENGTH VICTORY IN STEEPLECHASE RACE

By the Associated Press.

SANDOWN, England, Feb. 16.—Dorothy Paget's big jumper, Golden Miller, winner of the 1934 Grand National and one of the top favorites for the 1935 race, romped to victory by 10 lengths today in the Grand International Handicap Steeplechase at Sandown Park.

Really True ran second, five lengths ahead of J. B. Snow's Delaneige. Sorly Boy was fourth.

Golden Miller, the odds-on favorite at 40 to 95, took the jumps perfectly in the soft going and won amidst great enthusiasm shown by a large crowd.

His impressive victory of some 15 lengths over Delaneige, another favorite for the forthcoming Grand National, promised to make Golden Miller the prohibitive first choice for the big event.

Whitehead Gains Title.

Billikens Hope For Victory in Loyola Contest

Resuming their home basketball schedule, the St. Louis University Billikens tonight will oppose Loyola University of Chicago at the Gym on West Pine Boulevard. As an added feature, the freshman teams of Washington and St. Louis Universities will open their annual series. The preliminary game begins at 7:15 with the varsity players getting into action at 8:30.

In past years, Loyola was represented on the court by strong teams. The college doesn't play football and all attention was paid to basketball. This year, however, the material, it is said, has been none too good and the Billikens, admittedly strong, will be pre-game favorites. The freshman game may "steal the show."

Coach Mike Nyikos of St. Louis will have his strongest team in action with Bob Cochran and Charley Dirksen at the forwards, Len Hoffman at center and Herb Fash and John Flanigan at the guards. St. Louis will be trying for its eighth victory in 12 games.

VARSITY GAME.

The Walnut Park All-Stars, a semi-pro club, woud like to buy a set of uniforms. For information, call EVergreen 2462, or write Roy O'Brien, 5215 Alcott avenue.

The Bellefontaine girls' basketball team is seeking games to be played on opponents' floor, with any local or out-of-town girls' squad playing men's rules. Call MUlberry 1057 around 6 p. m.

The Christy Sports Club won a soccer match from the Patch A. C., 2—1. G. Zoeller and A. Hofer counted for the winners. The victors would like games for the rest of the season. Call John Kirnbauer, RIverside 7863J.

The Skulls would like to secure basketball games to be played on opponents' courts during February and March. Write H. Lippert, 4003 N. Twenty-fifth street, or call Fred Waldschmidt, COlfax 8025W.

Domino soccer eleven would like to play strong uniformed teams. Call GRand 2782 and ask for Glenn, between 5 and 6 p. m.

CENTRAL-SLAVIA CUP MATCH IS SET FOR FEB. 24

By Dent McSkimming.

There will be no national soccer cup match in St. Louis tomorrow as a result of a postponement obtained by the Central club late yesterday. Their game with Slavia of Cleveland, originally scheduled for Sportsman's Park, tomorrow afternoon, has been moved back one week to Feb. 24. Efforts are being made today by officials of the St. Louis Soccer League, of which the Centrals are a member, to induce the Municipal Soccer League to reciprocate by postponing its semifinal round elimination games to Sunday, March 3, leaving Feb. 24 open.

In view of the fact that the Muny League opens its elimination schedule tomorrow with a triple-header at Fairground Park, the local professional league officials thought it unwise to stage their national cup match as a counter attraction. Soccer fans wish to see both programs and there would be a disastrous division of attendance. Under the present arrangement, the Muny Leaguers will have the day to themselves tomorrow, and the professionals want a similar clear field on Feb. 24.

While the Centrals are battling Cleveland here, the Marre club of this city will be at Pittsburgh, playing against the Curry club. The victors in these two games probably will meet in a western division semifinal.

The Municipal League schedule tomorrow will be as follows: Russos vs. Irish Village, 12:30 p. m.; Carlstroms vs. St. Hedwig, 2 p. m.; Alpen Braus vs. Balsanos, 3:30 p. m. The games will all be played on Grounds 2, and there will be an admission charge of 25 cents.

PRINCIPIA SWIM TEAM BEATS CENTRAL HIGH

The Principia Academy swimming team defeated the Central High tank squad, 40 to 35, in a dual meet in Howard Pool yesterday afternoon. Coach J. C. Flint's swimmers captured the 160-yard relay, the three free style events and a sufficient number of seconds and thirds to gain the victory.

The summaries:
160-YARD RELAY—Won by Principia (Finkenberg, DeBruler, Cuniberti, Davis). Time—1:24.1.
100-YARD BREAST STROKE—Won by Piotrowski, Central; Kneeland, Principia, second; Orchard, Principia, third. Time—1:22.6.
40-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Priesmeyer, Principia; Lampert, Central, second; Rose, Central, third. Time—:21.4.

FATHER KILLS SUBNORMAL SON AND WOUNDS SELF IN HEAD

Kansas City (Mo.) Shootings Result of Financial Worries and Boy's Condition, Officers Say.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 15. — William H. Dirck, 47 years old, shot and killed his 17-year-old son, Robert Lee Dirck, whom police described as subnormal, here yesterday and then shot himself. He was taken to a hospital in a serious condition.

The boy and a younger brother, Clel Dirck, 8, were in bed together when the shooting occurred. The smaller boy rushed into the kitchen to tell his mother, Mrs. Kathreen Dirck, that his father had shot himself in the head.

Dr. P. H. Owens, Coroner, said he believed the shooting was the result of despondency over financial affairs. Mrs. Dirck said her husband had announced he intended to kill himself. She believed him to be joking, she said. Dirck came here from Oskaloosa, Kan., four years ago. A mortgage on his home here was foreclosed last fall.

114,000 NEEDY FAMILIES TO RECEIVE GARDEN SEED

Distribution in Missouri to Be Made Through County Relief Committees.

By the Associated Press

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 16.—Seeds for subsistence home gardens will be furnished to 114,000 needy Missouri families this year, Wallace Crossley, State Relief Administrator, said today. Last year seeds were furnished to approximately 74,000 families.

Distribution of the seeds will be made soon through county relief committees, Crossley said. Seeds will be given "near-relief cases," as well as to families on relief rolls.

Eighteen varieties of seeds will be distributed—enough, if properly planted and cultivated, Crossley said, to supply an average family with fresh vegetables from May 1 to Oct. 15, with a surplus for canning.

HAPPEL HELD SANE, GETS LIFE FOR MURDERING WIFE

Los Angeles Judge, However, Says Defendant Is Man in His "Second Childhood."

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.—John H. Happel, 58 years old, who beat his wife to death, dismembered the body and crammed it into a trunk, was adjudged sane yesterday and sentenced to life imprisonment. Superior Judge Charles W. Fricke, who had the power to sentence him to the gallows, said Happel was a man in his "second childhood."

Happel's attorney contended the defendant was crazed with hunger when he killed his wife because she refused to cook for him. Happel confessed he also killed Henry W. Meyer, a tenant on a farm of Happel's wife, near St. Louis.

Returned to his cell in the county jail, Happel burst into delirious laughter, and exclaimed, "Now I'll get plenty to eat the rest of my life."

Happel had pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity and waived jury trial. Under California law, the plea automatically results in conviction when insanity is disproved.

PROPOSAL TO LIMIT LIQUOR OUTPUT OPPOSED AT HEARING

Dr. J. M. Doran Says "American Drinking Habits Are Not Yet Determined."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Opposition to the Federal Alcohol Control Administration's proposal to limit and allocate production, cease issuing new permits or revoke inactive permits for liquor rectifiers was expressed by representatives of the industry at a hearing today.

"The drinking habits of the American people are not yet determined," said Dr. J. M. Doran, supervisor of the Distiller Code Authority. He said it would be "folly" to attempt to limit production.

The administration had offered figures to show that production this year would exceed the maximum demand by more than two to one. Administrator Joseph H. Choate Jr. estimated consumption at 141,411,712 gallons and potential production at 349,053,969 gallons.

Mule Prices Remain High.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Feb. 15.—The price of mules remains extremely high in Southeast Missouri as the planting season nears. Teams are selling as high as $300 to $400 on the average, and a Cape Girardeau dealer this week shipping a fine team to Blytheville, Ark., sold them for $550. Mules of good weight and height, from 4 to 7 years old, are most in demand.

MRS. DRENNAN MEETS MISS BAUER IN FINAL

By the Associated Press.

NASSAU, N. P. Bahamas, Feb. 16.—Miss Jean Bauer of Providence, R. I., continued to coast along toward victory in the British Colonial women's golf tournament yesterday, defeating her semifinal opponent, Mrs. O. B. Keeler of Atlanta, Ga., 7 and 5. Her competition to-in the final will be of sterner nature, however, coming from Mrs. Eselle Drennan of Tulsa, Ok., who eliminated Mrs. H. David Sterrett of Hutchinson, Kan., three and two.

SQUASH RACQUETS MEET OPENS THIS AFTERNOON

The annual scratch squash racquets tournament at the University Club will begin this afternoon at the club, with 100 members playing in four squash racquet class events and one squash tennis tourney.

Jack Gordon, winner of the Western squash racquets championship last Sunday in Chicago, is defending champion and favorite in the championship class. Play will also start in the A, B and C classes.

ECONOMIC PLIGHT BECOMING MORE ACUTE IN FRANCE

Business Conditions Worse Than They Have Been Since the World Depression Began.

PARLIAMENT AGAIN SHOWS UNEASINESS

Increase of 160,000 in Unemployed Since September — One Estimate of Total 1,500,000.

(Copyright, 1935.)

PARIS, Feb. 16.—The economic situation in France is becoming more acute. Business conditions here are now worse than they have been since the world slump began, and the French still have no indication of when they will hit the bottom of their depression.

In the last week political uneasiness again has cropped up in Parliament, forcing recognition of the fact that the Government of Premier Flandin will be sorely tested if it is to remain in power until Easter or much beyond. From now until midsummer at least France feels it must be prepared for rude shocks, whether economic or political by nature.

Increase in Jobless.

Warning signals are now appearing from many quarters. The registered total of unemployed has just exceeded 480,000, an unprecedented increase of 160,000 since September, but it is admitted that the real number of unemployed exceeds 1,000,000, while some observers estimate 1,500,000 is probably accurate. In any case France is now gripped by the greatest unemployment since the war, while partial unemployment is terrifically heavy, with fully 50 per cent of industry working less than the normal 48 hours a week.

Business failures and receiverships averaged 1255 monthly during 1934, but continued to increase steadily since Jan. 1. Thus business activity is slowing down as lack of confidence spreads, despite Premier Flandin's energetic efforts to improve conditions. As a result the Government's receipts are badly hit.

Revenue for 1934, at 35,389,000,000 francs (about $2,359,000,000) was not only $81,400,000 less than 1933, but fell short of the estimates by a serious margin of $280,000,000. The Government has already resorted to credit inflation by raising the limit for short-term Treasury bond issues by $333,000,000, yet it faces the need of another $750,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 before the year ends.

Communities' Credit Troubles.

Meanwhile numerous municipalities and communes are beset by credit difficulties and are without funds to supply their share of unemployment doles. On this very problem Flandin was appealed to last week by a delegation of Senators and Deputies from the Seine Department and promised to try to do something. The Premier, however, seized the opportunity to declare that "parliamentary intrigues which have recommenced have as their object and effect to paralyze our action. Speaking frankly, I am prevented from governing. Without a truce, no solution can be possible."

This is taken as a warning that it would be a serious risk for France to be exposed to a Cabinet crisis under the prevailing circumstances. Nevertheless, the Right and Left Extremists are chafing for another grapple for power, with appetites whetted by municipal elections to come in the spring. The recent anniversary of last February's sanguinary riots was celebrated by the Right Wing Nationalist organization placing white flowers in the Place de la Concorde and the anti-Fascist "Common Front" heaping the Place de la Republique with red flowers. Beneath the surface the deep split of France into rival camps of Right and Left is being accentuated and abetted by economic ills.

Illinois Parents and Teachers.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—The Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers planned today for its annual convention in Peoria April 10, 11 and 12. The board of managers of the congress yesterday announced selection of committees for the convention as follows: Nominating Committee, Mrs. C. J. Nixon, Hamilton; Mrs. V. L. Bowman, Aurora; Mrs. Russell Shriver, Charleston; Mrs. Robert D. Pringle and Mrs. Edward W. Jackson, both of Chicago. Committee on Committees: Mrs. Theodore Gleichman, Moline; Mrs. Bruce Smith, Blue Island; Mrs. A. T. Oleson, Aurora; Mrs. Frederick Holch, Glen Ellyn, and Mrs. Edwin G. Nichols, Chicago.

Ex-Service Men's Republican Club.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 15.—The Ex-Service Men's Republican Club of Missouri came into existence as a result of an organization formed at a meeting of World War veterans attending the Lincoln day banquet here. J. B. Fenton, chairman of the Greene County Committee, was elected temporary chairman and A. G. Taubert of Warrensburg temporary secretary. J. Grant Frye of Cape Girardeau, former commander of the Legion, was named chairman of a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws. A State rally of the new organization will be held in the near future.

Still More Hauptmann.

Nobody to Fight Him.

Watch the Diesel.

Happy, and Do Not Know It.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.
(Copyright, 1935.)

YOUNG gentlemen reporters, old gentlemen editors, are inventing new Hauptmann theories, including the theory that he had an accomplice; but no, not to save his life, not to win heaven itself would he reveal the name of that accomplice.

An imaginative Hauptmann lawyer thinks 1,000,000 Americans will contribute to a fund to fight for Hauptmann's release. Some think the number would be less than 1,000,000. Hauptmann will be moved to a death cell in Trenton State prison, with "deck" secrecy to add romance. No secrecy is necessary, for as Al Capone said, "the man who committed that kidnaping belongs to no regular mob." With no regular mob, there is nobody to interfere with the death cell trip.

Pennsylvania would make "death mandatory" for kidnaping with extortion. If they don't "seek to extort money or other valuables, it isn't death" which seems to attach excessive importance to "money or other valuables."

The New York Evening Journal quotes Mr. Hauptmann's wife, begging him to confess, if he is guilty, asking "Did you do it? Were you there?" To which Hauptmann replies, "Anna, if the electric chair stood where you are now, I would have nothing to tell. I have told the truth."

To a reporter Hauptmann said, "I am more religious than most people." He denied indignantly any trace of atheism.

That is interesting, because barring the unexpected, Hauptmann will soon know what foundation exists, if any, for atheistic belief.

Washington reports that Senators tread softly in the neighborhood of Huey Long. They walk around him, as it were, on their tiptoes, seeking no trouble with that gentleman whose motto is "every man a king and I the Kingfish."

Senator Long says he wants an investigation of all Government building operations in New York in which Postmaster-General James A. Farley had any interest. The Senate answers, "Yes, indeed, certainly, by all means, Mr. Long." Is there anything else you would like?" It takes two to make a fight; Huey Long is only one.

Watch Diesel engines, on the ground, in the air.

Dave Evans, racing driver, drove a Diesel automobile faster than 125 miles an hour, at Daytona, Fla., yesterday. Airplanes with Diesel engines will take passengers from the Atlantic to the Pacific between breakfast and supper for less than $10 apiece soon. Write that down.

James A. Moffett, Federal Housing Administrator, says the country is out of the depression, but does not know it. In the West, he "found business conditions definitely improved. Los Angeles alone has pledged $100,000,000 in new construction and modernization, involving all types of buildings." San Francisco likewise has embarked on an ambitious building program.

Now if 10,000,000 or 12,000,000 idle Americans can get back to jobs, even though they may "not know it," all will be well.

An unusual man is Vincent Deleo, 30 years old, sitting in the death house of Sing Sing prison, soon to die, telling jailers, "I want no reprieve." He refuses to take the half-hour exercise allowed to death house prisoners, says "I do not want any visitors, I do not want to write anything to anybody. I want no effort to keep me from the electric chair."

Deleo, who killed one of the keepers in Clinton prison, recalls grotesquely an old song: "Here's to the man who's content with his lot, who never goes sighing for what he has not."

This would be a dangerous world if more men were as indifferent to death as this man seems to be. The safety of the many is in the instinct of self-preservation in the individual. Remove fear of death, and who would be safe?

Strikes are still important in the news. Organized labor believes that the Government is back of it, and considers the "employer always wrong, and the employe always right." It was once thought that employers provide jobs. That is archaic theory, now.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., reports two dynamitings, two men shot dead, two more seriously wounded. The dynamite explosions were not aimed at mine owners or mines but at the families of members of the Union Mine Workers of America, a rival union, competing with the

IN MOVIE LAND

By Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 15.

HISTORY certainly does repeat itself in the movies. Conrad Nagel, who for years and years was Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's white-haired boy, is back on the lot. He is chosen for the male lead in "Order Please," a murder mystery play to be produced by Bernard Hyman, which goes into immediate production with Jack Conway directing. Jack has to get it finished in time to sail for Europe in April and especially interesting is the word that this will be Ruth Gordon's debutant film. She plays a telephone operator. Two reasons why Ricardo Cortez bowed out of playing the grownup lead in Jackie Cooper's picture, "Dinky." One is that he objected to playing just a nice young man in the movies and the other because he felt he would be just a stooge to Jackie. Ricardo, it appears, has a terrible yen to direct and he begged to be permitted to direct this picture which he thought had great possibilities as a Cooper vehicle. Roger Pryor has been signed to take the Cortez role.

Conrad Nagel.

Good Turn.

There is never any pretense or affectation about Ruby Keeler. She is one of the real people who goes about doing nice things for people without telling the world. I happened to hear today that Ruby's little sister, age 13, is sick and must go to the hospital for a blood transfusion. Ruby, who is devoted to her entire family, appreciating the child's fright, suddenly realized that a bone in her instep needed to be operated upon so she engaged one room and will go into the hospital to remain with the little girl.

Back Again.

Mickey Rooney will be back at the Warner Brothers studio at the end of the week but he can't do the sprightly jumps that made his puck so youthful and captivating in the Hollywood Bowl production of "Midsummer Night's Dream." Max Reinhardt, however, has the solution. He will photograph Mickey from the waist up and then shoot George Breakstone in the long shots. What a pity that Mickey should have broken his leg in the middle of what will probably be one of the most interesting pictures ever produced. It's no longer any news that Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard are secretly married. But it is news that Charlie admitted it at a recent party. A guest at this very small affair composed of Charlie's closest friends, whispered that Charlie, in the presence of this gathering, said that Paulette had been Mrs. Chaplin for over a year but he refused to say when and where the ceremony had been performed.

Paulette Goddard.

Profile.

The New Yorker has given Sam Behrman an assignment to write a "profile" on his very good friend, Sol Wurtzel. Not just an ordinary profile in one or two installments, but an article that will run as long as its author feels necessary. He is a close friend of Wurtzel's and, probably better than anyone else, can do justice to Sol who, although he has been in the picture business for a long time, still has never had much publicity.

Snapshots.

Miriam Hopkins' greatest admirer, Lawrence Riley, author of "Personal Appearance," not getting much encouragement; however, young Riley, not easily discouraged; Glenda Farrell giving a farewell dinner in honor of the boy friend, Ronnie Simon, New York merchant, who is leaving for the East; Dorothy Parker and the handsome husband, Alan Campbell, feteing the Hollywood literati and others with a huge party; William Hawkins, New York newspaper man and one of the Scripps-Howard bosses, entertaining with a small dinner; he won at the races by merely playing his hunches; Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Aylesworth, his close friends, not so lucky; Fred Keating at a night spot for the first time since his operation; Joan Whitney Peyton, the guest of the Donald Ogden Stewarts; they were all at the races; also young Alfred Vanderbilt; Leo Morrison collecting all the Hollywood husbands for a stag in honor of Lieutenant-Governor Hatfield.

Alan Campbell.

Silver and glasses will look brighter and more gleaming if they are dried directly from their water and soap-sud washing rather than after a rinsing. Use very hot water for both silver and glass. Use a dry towel; a damp one will take away the bright look and make the glasses look dingy.

The Foundation Of Personality And Character

They Are Built Bit by Bit From Contacts and Experiences.

By Elsie Robinson

WHAT are you?

What is this thing we call the human spirit? What is personality?

Is it a chemical reaction? A physical phenomenon? Are you the result of your glands — the sum total of your flesh, hair, toenails, teeth, blood and bone? Or is the real YOU something much bigger and better — and less perishable?

Elsie Robinson

Long years ago some wise men conceived a curious theory concerning you. They decided that you are much larger than you think you are. You think of yourself as inhabiting a certain body, living in a certain place, bearing a certain name, having certain responsibilities, relationships, thoughts and emotions. That, you believe, is your life.

But these wise men believe that your life and your spirit went much further than that. That, they said, was merely your CONSCIOUS SELF. Actually, only the core of yourself. Your real self stretched far beyond your body—was aware of things which lay entirely outside the comprehension of your body.

Often you know that someone has come into the room. You haven't seen them come. You didn't hear them. Then how do you know they are there? Through that wider self which stretches, ghost-like, but keenly alive, outside the body, the wise men decided.

A strange and fascinating theory. Is it true? Nobody knows. But this much is certainly true. We CAN, if we wish, have a wider existence than that which is confined within our personal experiences. WE CAN HAVE AS WIDE A SELF AS WE WISH TO BUILD.

We are not born with our characters—we accumulate and create them. We build character or personality as we build a house or a business—bit by bit—using contacts, experiences, impressions—instead of bricks and steel, stocks, bonds and material assets.

What kind of experiences? Any kind. EVERY kind. The wider the range of your contacts and experiences, the more elastic and colorful your personality and the greater your popularity. For the more you know of life, through your own ups-and-downs, the more you'll be able to enter into, understand and influence other lives.

There is nothing more greatly desired than a charming and compelling personality. There is almost no limit to the power of a person who possesses such a personality. And the person without personality suffers endless humiliation and bitter resentment.

Yet if you'll study "colorless" persons you'll soon see why they are that way. Their lives are lack-luster and limited because they are too cowardly or conceited to accept those challenges and criticisms which would mature them and make their lives dramatic.

They can't stand rebuffs, losses, disappointments and shocks which inevitably come to those who live abundantly. And so they huddle within the safety and comfort of their petty prejudices, their tiresome mannerisms—and then wonder why others are not drawn to share their stale isolation.

We like those who enlarge our lives—we seek out those who add color and flavor to existence. That is the secret of popularity. But you can't give color unless you have accumulated it yourself. You can't enlarge the other fellow's life until you've had the courage to enlarge your own.

You'd like to be popular? Nothing's holding you—except yourself. If you want popularity, the makings are all around you. But can you, will you, take them?

Fine Hosiery

If a small hole appears in the fine chiffon stockings, take time and mend it when you remove your stockings. Then it will not develop into a large hole or run during the washing process and the hosiery will last longer.

JOKESMITH

His Face-Reddeners Have Aided St. Louis Pests for 39 Years

By Virginia Irwin

HAVE you ever attended one of those parties where the host responds to your request for a match by offering you a box that whirrs like a rattle snake about to strike, or presents you with a cigar that explodes? Where the peanuts and hot dogs turn out to be rubber and the highball glasses dribble over your shirt front?

If you have had one or all of these disconcerting experiences, you probably decided at the end of the evening that your host was an escaped inmate of a psychopathic ward, but, really, you shouldn't be too hard on him.

The explanation of the whole thing is that at some time or another he has probably wandered into a novelty shop to buy a game for Junior or a Valentine for his wife and thereby unwittingly started himself on the road to becoming a nuisance.

"Yes, that's the way it happens," says Udo Gruenewaelder, who has been encouraging practical jokers in St. Louis for 39 years. "A customer comes in for a book or a puzzle. He sees this little box maybe on the counter. The sign says 'American Hairless Dog.' He notices the holes in the box for watering the dog, and then his curiosity is aroused. He opens the box and finds—look—a rubber wiener! Now that, he thinks, would be a good joke to play on a friend. Maybe he buys the 'American Hairless Dog' and maybe he doesn't, but the first thing you know he is looking over the other novelties and usually he buys a couple."

Lido Gruenewaelder

Udo and Ewald — that's his brother's name—are veterans of the joke business. The concern was started in 1882, 53 years ago, by their father, John Gruenewaelder.

"I started in the business when I was 16," Udo reminisced. "At that time the stock was mostly books and stationery. I was interested in the few novelties my father carried and then I began adding to the novelty line until today our business is mostly novelties. The depression hurt us of course, but not like what you'd expect. Even during hard times, people have to laugh, and they can get laughs with these novelties."

There seems to be no order in the rather dark little shop presided over by the chuckling and portly Udo, but he can find any one of the thousands of novelties in a split second. Even after 39 years, he apparently still enjoys demonstrating his line of face-reddeners and will entertain you as long as you want to be entertained with the most amazing assortment of gadgets imaginable.

One promises a picture of a bathing girl if you look into a small tube and turn a screw. You turn the screw and are rewarded, not with the picture of the bathing girl, but with an eye full of water. A book title leads you to look inside for the spicy confessions of the girl on the cover and your curiosity is satisfied with a terrible bang as the spring inside the cover is released and explodes a powder cap. A package of chewing gum contains a minature mouse trap which seizes your finger as you withdraw a piece of gum. Jars labeled "Fine Marshmallows" and "Red Raspberry Jam" release realistic looking snakes when the lid is unscrewed, and packages of cigarettes are rigged up with springs to make them buzz horribly when they are touched. Rubber peanuts, walnuts and brazil nuts and rubber pretzels repose side by side with plush mice and tin bugs of all kinds.

A favorite with Udo is the auto joker, also known as the auto burglar alarm. Directions for attaching the device to the spark plugs of a friend's automobile are printed on the package and it is guaranteed to make "you laugh, until you cry." When the victim steps on the starter of his automobile, this fireworks novelty will "shoot, whistle, scream, smoke and shoot again."

"It is so funny," laughs Udo. "The poor fellow gets out of his car and walks around it several times, but always at some distance. He really expects his whole car to blow up and you can't blame him. The auto joker makes such an awful noise."

One practical joker, who happened to be a lady, bought one of these auto jokers and had so much fun with it that she came back the next day and bought $5 worth.

"I have lots of customers who come in regularly every week and ask if anything new has come in since they were here last. And people from out of town come to the shop when they are visiting in St. Louis and buy the novelties that have been put on the market since their last visit."

But Udo isn't so enthusiastic about the very latest novelty he has added to his stock. It is a metal box with something like a record inside it. You simply pull a string and a rather squeaky voice from your coat pocket issues an invitation to "come up and see me some time." Or, if you prefer, you may buy a chatterbox which will ask "Wanna buy a duck?" Or even one that will say what you dare not —"Oh, you kiddo."

The genial Pine street joke vendor will not only drag out all the gadgets in his shop for your amusement, but he will give you the benefit of his 39 years of experience and tell you exactly how to give a successful party.

MEET your guests at the door wearing a flower in your buttonhole. As they stoop to smell your boutonniere, squeeze the small bulb concealed inside your coat and watch them have apoplexy as a snake jumps out of the heart of the flower. Next, provide several of the guests with dribble glasses and watch them mop their shirt fronts. When the hors d'oeuvres are served, each guest can be included in the joke. A tiny, fly, spider, or cockroach can be imbedded in the caviar, and the expressions of horror on their faces will be genuine as they discover the insects. Or these bugs can be placed in the bottom of a coffee cup or in the crust of a pie. Their usefulness is practically unlimited.

For after-dinner sport the revolving picture is suggested. The victim must be instructed to hold the tube close to his eye so as to exclude all light from the rear and turn the tube slowly until the picture appears in the center. The joke to this is that there is no picture in the tube, but the part which he presses to his eye is felt, saturated with lampblack. Of course, he will complain that he saw no picture, but the rest of the guests will get a big laugh out of his black eye.

Tiny pegs may be inserted in the cigarettes to make them explode and the really successful party is never without an assortment of matches that behave in several extraordinary ways. Exploding matches are fairly common but snow matches always cause some consternation. These matches make a dense cloud of smoke which turns into a snow flurry as the smoke dies away.

Of course, the plush mouse should be turned loose at some time during the evening, especially if there are ladies present, and if you follow Udo's advice your party will turn out to be a huge success. In fact, it may turn out to be a riot.

Some Miscellaneous Recipes

By Gladys T. Lang

Icebox Rolls.

Three-fourths cup sugar.
One (good) teaspoon of salt.
One cup of crisco or lard.

Cream together and add one cup of boiling water. Mix well and set aside to cool. Beat two whole eggs. Dissolve two cakes of yeast in one cup of tepid water and add this to the above. Sift six cups of flour, add to this slowly the liquid mixture. Place in the refrigerator over night. When ready to use form into rolls and let rise for two hours. Bake for 10 or 15 minutes.

Corn Flake Pudding.

Melt two tablespoons of butter and from one-half to three-quarters cup of light brown sugar. In this carefully stir two cups of cornflakes. Have buttered a ring mold and in this lightly press the buttered and sugared cornflakes. Let stand for five minutes, then turn out on platter. Fill center with sweetened strawberries, raspberries or bananas folded into whipped cream.

Liver and Vegetable Casserole.

One pound of liver.
One and one-half tablespoons of flour.
One and one-half tablespoons of bacon drippings.
Salt and pepper.
One diced turnip.
Two diced carrots.
Two sliced onions.
One-fourth cup of cut up celery.
One-half bayleaf.
One cup of stock or water.
One cup of tomato juice.

Cut the liver in two-inch squares, roll in flour, mixed with salt and pepper, and brown lightly in the bacon drippings. Remove the liver and in the remaining fat brown the vegetables. Place liver and vegetables in a casserole, add the crushed bay leaf, tomato juice and stock. Cover and bake slowly about two hours, uncovering the dish the last half hour. The gravy may be thickened a little more if desired.

A Single Dish Dinner.

Mix one cup of rice that has been cooked rather dry with two cups of drained canned peas and two cups of tomatoes, drained from liquid. Fry one medium sized finely chopped Spanish onion until soft and yellow in butter and in this put one and a half pounds of hamburger steak which has been seasoned with salt, pepper and celery salt and cook until nicely browned. Combine the rice, peas and tomatoes with the meat and mix thoroughly. Place in a casserole and bake slowly for an hour. If you find it is getting too dry, add just a little stock or water. Fifteen minutes before removing from fire, cover with a mixture of bread crumbs and cheese.

Black Walnut Angel Cake.

One and one-fourth cups of pastry flour, measured after sifting.
One and one-half cups of sugar.
One rounded teaspoon of cream of tartar.
One and one-half cups of egg whites, or whites of 12 eggs.
Three-fourths cup of chopped black walnuts.
Generous pinch of salt.
Two tablespoons of orange juice and the grated rind of one orange.

After sifting and measuring flour, sift four or five times. Do the same with the sugar. On a large platter beat the egg whites until foamy. Add the cream of tartar and continue whipping until the whites stand in peaks, but not too dry. Fold in the grated orange rind and add the sugar, one tablespoon at a time. Then the flour, the same way, one tablespoon at a time until all is used. The last thing fold in the nuts and orange juice, folding just enough to blend. Pour into a large unbuttered angel cake pan and start in a warm oven for 15 minutes, increasing the temperature for the next 15 minutes, then reduce heat again and bake in all from 50 to 60 minutes or until cake starts shrinking from sides of pan. Invert and let get perfectly cool before removing from pan. Spread with an orange icing.

Orange Icing.

Two oranges, juice and grated rind.
One cup of powdered sugar.
Two beaten egg whites.

Boil the orange juice and grated rind with the sugar until the syrup spins a thread. Pour slowly onto the beaten whites and beat until almost cool. Spread over top and sides of cake.

Baked Fish in Tomato Sauce.

Salt and pepper both inside and out of a four-pound fish. Dice three medium sized onions and saute slowly in butter. Add a No. 2½ sized can of tomatoes and a can of tomato soup. Rub two bay leaves fine and add to the sauce with a bruised clove of garlic. Cook for 10 minutes, then run through a colander. Grease a pan with bacon drippings and heat. In this place the fish, dredge with flour and brown. Cover with strips of bacon and between each slice of bacon place a slice of unpeeled lemon. Cover with the sauce and bake for about an hour. Carefully remove fish to heated platter and surround with the sauce.

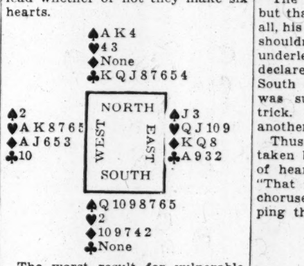

All Figured Out

When uncertain as to the size of your table for the number of invited guests remember each person should be allowed two feet of space along the table edge for absolute comfort.

A Hand in Which Success Depends on Opening Lead

By P. Hal Sims

THE power of distribution is a strange, unfathomable thing. East and West certainly have the preponderance of high-card strength in today's hand, yet it is purely dependent on the opening lead whether or not they make six hearts.

The worst result for vulnerable East and West was six hearts, doubled and redoubled. Presumably some other teams got doubled and also redoubled, only to have South timidly run out into six spades. With the opening lead—the brilliant opening lead—of the ten of clubs, six spades cannot be defeated.

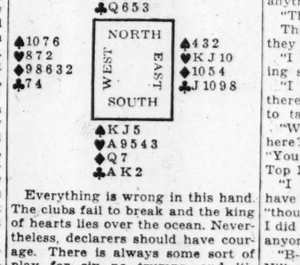

At any rate, these Machiavellian opponents refused to be cowed by the double. We can understand North's opening the king of spades, but we cannot understand his continuing with the ace of spades after he sees the dummy. One team was quietly permitted to make six hearts, however, and that must have been the defense.

This particular hero North, however, decided that spades were completely useless. He got off to the king of clubs. West happily covered with the ace and South ruffed. South had come to the same conclusion about spades as had his partner, so he played back a diamond. North ruffed.

The contract was now defeated, but that didn't content North after all, his partner had bid spades. Why shouldn't he have the queen? North underled the ace and king. The declarer ducked in the dummy, and South put up the five spot, which was sufficiently high to hold the trick. South pleasantly gave North another diamond ruff.

Thus the first four tricks were taken by the deuce, trey and four of hearts and the five of spades. "That for your aces and kings!" chorused North and South, snapping their fingers.

MONDAY'S HAND.

Everything is wrong in this hand. The clubs fail to break and the king of hearts lies over the ocean. Nevertheless, declarers should have courage. There is always some sort of play for six no trumps, and it's usually a squeeze.

Items of Interest.

In a recent list it was shown that the 238 stamp issuing countries of the world put out 193 fewer new stamps in 1934 than in 1933. In 1933 the number of stamps issued totaled 1877; in 1934, 1684.

It has been estimated that collectors to obtain all varieties of the new imperforate stamps will have to spend approximately $400.

The Postoffice Department has been requested to issue a stamp in memory of three celebrated American Negroes, Frederic Douglass, orator; Paul Laurence Dunbar, poet, and Booker T. Washington, educator, poet and author.

The following postoffices are applying 13 star cancellations: West Philadelphia Station, Philadelphia; Central Terminal R. P. O., Jersey City, N. J.; Wabash Station, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Bement, Ill.; Clyde, Tex., West Durham Station, Durham, N. C., Moorefield, W. Va., Republic, Mich., Valley Falls, R. I., Utica, Ill., and Stromberg, Neb.

The postoffice at Brewton, Ala., has bi-centennials in 4c, 5c, 6c, 7c and 10c values. These cannot be obtained from the Philatelic Agency.

New Issues.

ALBANIA—A special set of overprints were issued to commemorate the tenth anniversary of King Zogu's return from exile. The following values of the 1930 series have been overprinted as follows: "1924-1934, 24 Dheeteur," 1q, 2q, 5q, 10q, 15q, 25q and 1fr, 2fr and 3fr. The issue consisted of 15,000 sets, of which 3000 were placed on sale at the postoffices and sold the first day. The remaining 12,000 sets were sold to dealers.

BELGIUM—The new 75c portraying King Leopold III is to be withdrawn from sale and replaced by a 70c denomination, due to reduction in the domestic letter rate.

IRELAND—The ½d green and 2d green stamps of the current series have been issued in coils of 100 stamps perforated vertically and printed on the rotary press.

MEXICO—Scotts No. 660a listed as imperforate has been received.

Strange Night Noises Heard in Puddle Muddle

By Mary Graham Bonner

THE cold and the wind were continuing and now a blizzard was blowing over Puddle Muddle.

During the night Willy Nilly once more awoke his animal friends by opening the door and letting the cold wind blow in as he called out into the night:

"Is anyone there? Who is there?"

"Willy Nilly," said Top Notch, "you are just bent on thinking someone is outside."

"We're not going to be robbed are we?" asked Mrs. Quacko Duck.

"Who is going out robbing on a cold, windy snowy night like this?" asked Top Notch, the rooster, in his practical fashion. "Do have some sense, duck!

"In the first place, no one is going to come all this distance to rob us, knowing, in the second place, that we own nothing that is worth anything."

"That's so," agreed Rip the dog. They went back to sleep, but soon they all awoke.

"I do believe we have been hearing something," said Top Notch.

"I do, too, bow wow — what is there?" said Rip, without stopping to take a breath.

"Who would be coming around here?" asked Mrs. Quacko Duck. "You said no one would," she told Top Notch.

"I didn't say that we might not have a visitor," said Top Notch, "though $ thought it unlikely. What I did say was that we wouldn't have anyone coming here to rob us."

"B-l-e-a-t," came a voice. Willy Nilly opened the door and this time a visitor came in.

Style Note The new Paris profile has a molded bust, big sleeves, a slightly shorter and fairly full skirt and a slender waistline accented by wide belts of linoleum, spun glass, ribbon or leather with buckles of silver clasped hands or painted flower plaques.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I HATE just the same line as the other letters you receive. Nevertheless I should like a little advice.

I met a girl at a dance; after she watched me for a long time and in the end we started "going steady" together. I gave her a ring, but now everything is different. When we go to a party she plays around with every fellow there. If I dance with others and do not show her any attention, she gets mad.

This girl goes with crowds I do not like. When I get mad she says I don't love her or I would not act as I do. I found out that one of her old friends keeps asking her to marry him; she says she doesn't want to hurt his feelings. It hurts me and keeps me awake. Do you think I should put up with this? And last night she said she was trying to decide between us. And what shall I do? She wants me to stop loving her so much but I cannot do it.

S. S.

And when a girl is hurt and asks a boy why he doesn't love her any more and wants to win him back, the boy doesn't feel as you do now at all. Love doesn't sail along very smoothly, does it? When a girl is indifferent and flitting from beau to beau the boy is so fascinated he cannot give her up. He tells her she should be more constant to prove her love. But the moment she takes his advice and gives up all others, he wishes to goodness she wouldn't hang on so and begins to have a roving eye. What is a poor girl to do, with this love blowing hot and blowing cold?

Dear Mrs. Carr:

SOMEONE sent in a request for a recipe for "haystacks." I hope the inclosed will help.

Haystacks—Two tablespoons butter, one cup brown sugar, one-fourth cup water, 15 Graham crackers crumbled coarsely, three-fourths cup coconut, one-half teaspoon vanilla.

Melt butter in sauce pan, add sugar and water. Boil five minutes. Pour over mixed crackers and coconut, add vanilla. Shape into cones. This amount will make eight haystacks.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

KINDLY publish this letter in hope of reaching some business women and girls who are seeking just the friendship and fellowship our organization has to offer.

Business girls and women of St. Louis will find a place of fellowship and enjoyment at the Virginia Asher Business Women's Bible Circle which meets at the Y. W. C. A., 1411 Locust street, Thursday evenings from 5:30 to 7:30. A dinner is served from 5:30 to 6 at a nominal cost, followed by announcements, singing, devotions and a Bible lesson. Special events, banquets, picnics, entertainments and trips to Y. W. C. A. Camp Montevideo are held during the year. A birthday table is decorated each month, honoring those members whose birthdays are in the month. Those seeking friendship are cordially invited to come to these meetings.

MILDRED WINKLER,
Publicity Chairman.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a girl 13 years old, who is going to graduate in June. I am not going to say that my teacher has a pick on me, for, most of the time she treats me very nice. Lately, I have been doing my hair with fluffy bangs. Today she grew very angry with me and made a sarcastic remark about them, which embarrassed me very much. Later in the day we were choosing captains, and my class chose me as one of them. My teacher then announced before the class, that my grades were too poor to be captain. But the girls appointed had grades as poor as mine. I have lost all faith in this teacher as being a fair one.

I want to know if I should show resentment for this unfairness.

Another problem: I am five feet two inches and weigh 102 pounds. Should I weigh more or less?

GRACIE.

It would be a poor idea to show resentment. You would better try to improve your grades and win the respect and approval of your teacher. Her sarcasm meant, no doubt, that it would be better for you to spend less time on looks and more on books. The fact that the grades of others are poor is no justification for your poor grades. Perhaps she feels you have a better mind than these other girls and so flatters you by expecting more of you. There is nothing to be alarmed about in your weight. You might gain some and not hurt. Probably you would have more vitality for study and for sports if you were to add a few pounds.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a man in my late 20s, interested in a girl somewhat younger than myself. Although I have known this girl for several years I never went out with her alone.

The girl is neither old-fashioned nor extra-modern; rather one with plenty of self-respect and very pleasing personality. I visit her at her home and sometimes we go to the movies and visit some of her friends. It is different, however, when we go to a dance; she enjoys dancing. While I prefer to enjoy myself, I feel like a fish out of ice-water. The reason is that I have never liked jazz music and crowds, who seem to me to act rather silly at these places.

Now, since there are dancing places on every corner, it seems that is the only place to take a girl. What can a fellow of my type do?

DREAMER.

Learn to go 50-50, or at least try to get into the spirit of the music and the dance, when you do go. If you are not a good dancer, learn, and you will feel some of the exhilaration, which now seems silly to you.

You can still have your times for dreaming and for good literature and sober thought. There is no reason why you should be one great extreme or the other. Possibly the girl is just as bored with some of the interests you have. You can both make unselfish efforts to cultivate congenial tastes.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

Novelties Are Numerous in Spring Styles

Stores Show Unusual Diversions in Attire and Accessories.

By Sylvia

ST. LOUIS stores are demonstrating that oddities in women's clothes are very smart for spring. Dressy shoes that are made of lacquered string, capes that fasten in the back, necklaces resembling strings of bubbles and many other novelties are on display. Those striking sandals are crocheted of string, tinted to match a favorite frock, and coated with a liquid which gives them both sheen and protection. Combinations of white with blue, green and brown are featured at present.

Another spring shoe that offers diversion from the usual collections of oxfords and pumps is of navy blue kid trimmed with white kid that is so perforated it resembles lace. The shoe is of the built-up pump type having a tiny dark blue pearl button at one side of the instep. The white kid is arranged in the form of a ruffle that isn't very big but claims plenty of attention.

If you don't want your new spring cape to be blowing open all the time and showing the front of your frock, turn it around and wear it backward. Some of the most attractive capes in the spring displays were intended to fasten at the back. One of a striking plaid woolen is more than knee length. It fits snugly across the front and has a standing collar.

The bubble jewelry looks as though it would weight you down because the beads are as large as marbles. You'll discover soon, however, that a necklace or a bracelet is almost as light as a feather. One row of the beads is sufficient for a necklace but two may be used to fashion a wrist decoration. Pastel tints are featured in the array that is on exhibition on several jewelry counters.

When a dark spring suit calls for a gay spring blouse, you can't do better than to decide upon plaid taffeta. Diagonal criss stripes of red on a white background form a striking color scheme for an unusual blouse. One side of the front extends to form a long tie and one side of the back follows the same sort of scheme. The result is a scarf collar ending in a huge bow on one shoulder. Sleeves are three-quarter length and tucked underneath the elbows to provide a drape.

A cat's whiskers bow at the neckline is a feature of the taffeta blouse which accompanies one navy suit. The crisp material appears in a changeable hue of green and blue. Sheer wool crepe fashions this suit, a flattering part of which is the boxy jacket. The coat, by the way, is devoid of lining so the costume may be worn until summertime.

A redingote ensemble which introduces the dotted theme is one of the smartest as well as the most striking that could be selected for spring. A shirtwaist frock of navy silk coin dotted with white is attractive in combination with a navy novelty crepe coat. The printed material faces both collar and front of the wrap.

A belt can't be too wide to be in style this season. Some new ones on display in the stores are at least five inches from top to bottom. Patent leather and its imitator, oil cloth, are used extensively. One of shiny red leather illustrates the sensational trend by adding not only a huge silver buckle but a ball and chain type of fastening.

Don't get the idea that a black frock is likely to be a drab one. Designers are seeing to it that this is a fascinating fashion. A featured type is ankle length, has a shirtwaist blouse with short sleeves and frilly cuffs, and a very gay sash. Red and green taffeta unite to supply the brilliance at the waistline.

A NINETY-CENT DINNER FOR FOUR

An Analysis That Will Help You Plan Meals and Shopping

EVERY business employs a budget. The household business of feeding a family well at low cost would seem to concern too many persons during these days of high food prices to permit the household budget to be ignored for very long. For those of us who must watch pennies and delegate them to the place where they are going to do the most good a working budget of some kind must be followed.

The "90-cent dinner for four" is possible when the household budget allows approximately $12.60 a week for food. Half of this amount would cover the cost of breakfast, lunches and staples. The remaining $6.30 should provide well-planned, wholesome, palatable and altogether interesting dinners for the family.

Prices vary in different sections of the city. Therefore the actual cost of this menu might be only 88 cents in one neighborhood, whereas in another it might rise to 92 cents, or might show an equal variation in the same neighborhood within any one week. It often happens that certain foods other than what you have anticipated are offered at an attractive price on the day you do your marketing. In that event, the marketing list may easily be adjusted.

90-Cent Dinner for Four.

Braised ham with apple rings.....$0.38
Or
Curried lamb with sauted bananas.
Stuffed baked potatoes ..... .06
Cabbage au gratin ..... .10
Golden glow salad, mayonnaise..... .09
Raisin bread and butter..... .08
Apricot upside-down cake ..... .09
Tea (for adults) ..... .04
Milk (for two children) ..... .06

Total $0.90

Before we give the recipes for this menu, let us show how we determine the cost of each ingredient in order to get the cost, first of each dish, and then of the total menu.

The ham called for in the menu above was on sale at 23 cents a pound, provided you bought a whole or at least a half ham. Otherwise you would have had to pay 39 cents a pound. In order to take advantage of the lower price, we bought half a ham. From this half we had the butcher cut off two half-inch slices for immediate use. They weighed one and one-third pounds, making the cost of the meat for this one meal 31 cents, while the saving amounted to at least 21 cents.

The remainder of the ham we planned to use later in the week as roast ham and savory made-over dishes.

You can analyze the other ingredients of the different dishes in the same way. The upside-down cake, for instance, called for apricots. We bought a package containing 52 dried apricots for 23 cents. Only 14 apricots were used in making the cake, and these cost approximately 6 cents.

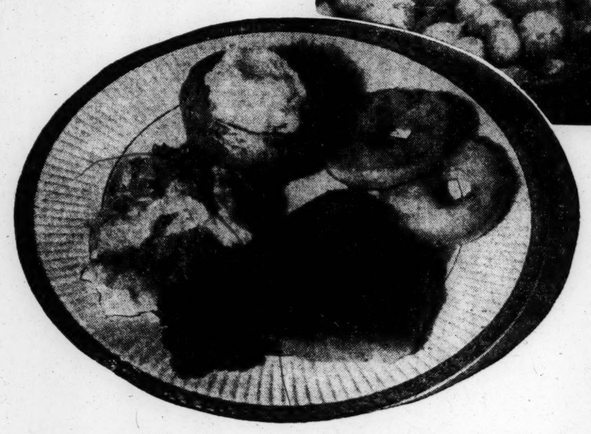

Look now at the recipe given for the cake and you will find that the total cost amounts to 18 cents. But the recipe makes eight servings, so that it can be used twice for a family of four, thus making the total cost of the dessert in our model menu just 9 cents.

Such careful figuring need not be done for each menu in the week after you have definitely established your weekly budget.

The marketing outline which appears with this article is made out in terms of definite quantities for the sake of economy of time as well as of money. You may find it desirable to buy in larger quantity, and you are inevitably going to buy more of certain items than you will use for one dinner. Future menus will make good use of the oversupply.

Your own marketing list, too, may vary from our outline, for you will make out your list not only on the basis of what is called for in the menu we have given, but also of what items in it you already have in your refrigerator and supply cupboard.

Above—Buy according to what is economical in the current market. Left—The main course of this model menu consists of ham with apple rings, stuffed baked potatoes and cabbage au gratin.

Ham Cutlets With Apple Rings.

Two half-inch slices of ham (1 1-3 lbs.)..$0.31
Hot water.
Four tablespoons brown sugar..... .007
Two tablespoons bread crumbs.
One-half cup pineapple juice..... .025
Two apples ..... .034
Two tablespoons cooking fat..... .001

Total $0.38

Cut each slice of ham in half. Parboil in simmering water 10 minutes. Arrange in baking pan and cover each piece with brown sugar, then bread crumbs. Pour pineapple juice over all. Bake uncovered in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 25 minutes. Serve with apple rings made by sauteing cored apple slices in fat until light brown in color. This will serve four persons.

Stuffed Baked Potatoes.

Six medium potatoes $0.028
Two tablespoons butter ..... .026
Salt.
Pepper.
Two tablespoons evaporated milk .... .006
Two tablespoons water.

Total $0.06

Wash potatoes thoroughly, scrubbing with a brush to remove all black specks. Bake in a very hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) 40 minutes, or until soft. Remove from oven, cut a slice off the flat side lengthwise and scoop out inside. Mash, add butter, season to taste and add evaporated milk diluted with water and heated. Beat vigorously until smooth and fluffy. Refill the large half of each potato shell and bake in very hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) about five minutes to brown. This will serve four persons.

Cabbage au Gratin.

Three cups shredded cabbage $0.04
Water.
Two tablespoons butter ..... .026
Two tablespoons all-purpose flour.
Three-fourths cup evaporated milk... .02
One-half teaspoon salt.
Four tablespoons bread crumbs.
Four tablespoons cheese, grated..... .01

Total $0.10

Cook cabbage in large amount of boiling water, uncovered, for 10 to 15 minutes. Melt butter in double boiler. Combine with flour. Add evaporated milk and three-fourths cup water in which the cabbage was cooked, continue stirring until gradually thickened. Add salt. Combine with cabbage. Arrange a layer of the cabbage mixture in a greased casserole, then a layer of bread crumbs. Repeat, making two layers of each. Sprinkle top with grated cheese and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. This will serve four persons.

Golden Glow Salad.

One-half package lemon-flavored gelatin $0.025
One cup hot water.
One-half tablespoon vinegar.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-fourth cup fresh grapefruit, diced .01
One-half raw carrot, coarsely grated.. .005
One-fourth head lettuce ..... .03
Four tablespoons mayonnaise ..... .02

Total $0.09

Dissolve gelatin in warm or hot water, according to directions on package. Add vinegar and salt. Chill until slightly thickened, then fold in the grapefruit and carrot. Turn into four small ring moulds and chill. Unmould on lettuce and serve with mayonnaise. This will serve four persons.

Apricot Upside-Down Cake.

Four tablespoons shortening $0.002
One-half cup granulated sugar..... .013
One egg ..... .04
One cup all-purpose flour ..... .002
One and one-fourth teaspoons baking powder ..... .001
One-fourth cup evaporated milk..... .006
One-fourth cup water.
One-half teaspoon vanilla.
Three tablespoons butter, melted..... .039
One-half cup brown sugar ..... .015
14 apricot halves, cooked ..... .06

Cream the shortening and add the granulated sugar gradually, creaming well. Add the egg, well beaten. Mix and sift the dry ingredients and combine alternately with the evaporated milk and water to the first mixture. Flavor with vanilla. Melt butter in a skillet or cake pan. Add the brown sugar and stir until sugar is melted. Arrange the cooked apricot halves in this syrup, cut side up, and pour the cake batter over them. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about 50 minutes. When done, loosen cake from sides and bottom with a spatula and turn onto a cake plate. Cut in pie sections for serving. This will serve eight persons.

Miscellaneous Problems of Social Usage

The Use of Titles on Wedding Invitations — Tea Party Tables.

By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post:

MY FATHER has been a professor at a small college for many years, and now that I'm marrying, we don't know whether his title should be included on the wedding invitation. It seems to me I read that this was bad form, but it will be very strange to everyone to see my father's name prefixed by "Mr."

Emily Post

Answer: Usually a professor prefers to be called "Mr." outside of college. But if he is still a member of the faculty and the invitations may be said to go out from the college, then "Professor and Mrs. John Jones" will be proper, especially as the invitations will undoubtedly include many persons connected with the college.

Dear Mrs. Post:

May I set my dining table with a lovely lace cloth which I never seem to have opportunity to use, for a large afternoon tea party and for cocktails?

Answer: I would not use it for cocktails, but it would be proper for any buffet table, and in addition for a lunch party or a supper.

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it true that from the time a woman wears an engagement ring up to the day of her wedding, she ought not to wear any other ring?

Answer: I think I have heard of this in Germany but I am not sure. At all events it is not—so far as I know—an American custom. And certainly not one of New York. Of course, she wears no other ring on the same finger—and probably no other on her left hand.

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you please tell me how to keep up a well-run appearance in my house, which has only one servant? I mean, what can I do about her clothes, which necessarily must be practical, and yet I'd like my maid to look smart.

Answer: This is really a matter of personal talent on the part of the woman herself. One can look as though she belonged on a fashion plate no matter what she does; another looks a slattern. My advice is to engage one who looks smartly tidy in the first place. Then of course give her uniforms that fit and enough of them to keep fresh. Well cut cotton wash dresses in a solid color with sheer aprons, cuffs, and collars are perfectly suitable at all times. A fresh one twice a week, first worn afternoon and evening and then in the mornings.

Spiced Pumpkin

A novel little pumpkin butter that may be made readily from canned pumpkin. One quart pumpkin pulp, one pound sugar, one teaspoon ground cinnamon, one-half teaspoon ginger, one-half teaspoon each of ground mace and cloves, the juice of two lemons. Mix canned pumpkin and other ingredients together and cook slowly until thick, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking. Pour into glasses and seal when cold.

SOME CONSTRUCTIVE CRITICISM FOR THE TIGERS

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

The Monett Cubs and Lamar's Tigers played Friday on the local court. The Tigers shaded their opponents 27 to 24. The terrible basket shooting of both teams held the score down. Lamar's attack is very smooth and the boys usually manage to get the ball near their basket, but here their games slip. They seemingly shoot at everything but the basket.

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear, Helpful Aunt Bella:
Where is Old Faithful Geyser located?
Worried.

Ans.—This question has a familiar ring, Sir or Madame "Worried." Once before Auntie replied, in good faith, to an inquiry in this vein and received a rather insulting answer in the United States mail which the authorities were never able to trace, unfortunately. So if you wish to know my home address please say so in the first place.

Right now he is preparing to lead an expedition into the forgotten bad lands adjoining Chicago, where he will endeavor to dig up the remains of data tending to indicate that Al Capone was really the father of the NRA price fixing policy when he organized the cleaning and dyeing industry. In fact, if the present NRA set-up gets any wobblier, the AHS will recommend that Capone be paroled and flown to Washington to serve as economic advisor during the emergency.

Cells of Body Constantly In Liquid Bath

Mineral Containing Lymph Thought to Help Prevent Infection.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE cells of the body are constantly surrounded, bathed by a liquid medium. For all practical purposes we are the same as a marine or sea animal. Except we carry our ocean around inside of us. The very mineral content of the fluid around our cells is not unlike that of sea water. From the sea we came, and of the seas we still smack.

Usually we think of this fluid as blood—and partly it is. On account of the properties of the red cells, the blood is the medium for carrying oxygen, the necessary chemical element for energizing, from the lungs to the tissues.

But there is another fluid even more intimately in contact with the cells of the body than blood—the lymph. It is a clear fluid, containing no red cells, but a great many of the white cells or scavengers of the body. The lymph probably is derived entirely from the clear serum of the blood, and oozes out of the smallest vessels—the blood capillaries—into the tissue spaces.

In these tissue spaces, closely in contact with each cell, it moves sluggishly, making many chemical adjustments and interchanges with the cells. But it does not always wander blindly in open spaces. Sooner or later in its movements it is taken up and collected in channels of its own—thin-walled vessels, not unlike, but totally separate from, the capillaries of the blood.

The work which this universal fluid, everywhere, bathing every cell of the body, does must be very important. But as yet we do not know a great deal about it. As the blood carries oxygen and sugar—the energizers—to the tissues, the lymph may carry fat and proteins — the building materials. We know that in its contained white cells it carries fat and peptones. Perhaps also it carries the hormones—the products of the ductless glands. Except the most important of all for regulatory purposes—the adrenalin from the adrenal gland.

On the stability of these fluids, at least, rests all our safety—life itself would be snuffed out by cold, by diminution of oxygen, by the slightest exertion, did not automatic forces of the greatest complexity keep these fluids in chemical and physical equilibrium. How this is done and how our indifference to certain rules of hygiene tend to minimize the efficiency of the regulatory agents, will be explained in a later article this week.

There is one function of the lymphatics, however, which is most important and undisputed—their action in protecting the body from infection. To aid them in this the lymph channels swell into small nodes, designed to enmesh and kill bacterial invaders.

Thumbnail Reviews of New Movies

THE GOOD FAIRY—An absorbing Ferenc Molnar comedy, such capable stars as Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan and Herbert Marshall and an excellent supporting cast—all three wishes are granted! Along with a stage show, at the AMBASSADOR.

SEQUOIA—A wild life picture with enough action to make the usual effort look like a trained flea circus, a deer and a mountain lion appearing as Mr. Damon and Mr. Pythias. "The Night Is Young," says the title of the second picture, without discussing the age of the plot. At LOEW'S.

RUMBA—A kind of Caribbean cruise with Carole Lombard, rich gal on a yacht, and George Raft, dancer in a Havana night club. Sluggish in spite of fine staging and some pretty good dancing. In "Red Hot Tires," good and bad are at it again, this time on an automobile race track. Both pictures at the SHUBERT.

ONE MORE SPRING—Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter spend the winter with two other guys in a tool shed in Central Park, without interfering with the normal progress of the seasons. "The Ghost Walks," a tittery-jittery, is the second picture at the FOX.

WINGS IN THE DARK—Cary Grant, inventor, goes blind to prove he can play an instrumental solo in the sky without looking. Myrna Loy is the armful. Plot is a little too rarefied. "The Woman in Red" is Barbara Stanwyck in high society, in love, in scandal. At the ORPHEUM.

A NOTORIOUS GENTLEMAN—Charles Bickford picks up the perfect crime and almost gets away with it. Several new approaches, which are badly needed for the heavy traffic over the idea. "Women Must Dress" is the picture using up the winners in a snapshot contest last summer. At the MISSOURI.

ALL THAT GLITTERS

A New Serial — By ANNE GARDNER

Jerry Becomes a Proud Mother, Still Unaware of the Financial Tragedies Around Her.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN.

JERRY was in her own room at the hospital, Gordon leaning over her anxiously, when she began to return to consciousness, moaning and shivering as her mind began to remember what her body had been through.

"Jerry, dearest, are you all right? Speak to me, Jerry, tell me you're all right!" he was saying over and over.

Jerry tried to open her eyes, but there were iron weights on the lids, and the light hurt. "I'm all right," she said in a thin, high, unsteady voice. Her teeth were chattering. "I guess I'm all right. Little Gordon—is he all right?"

"It's little Jerry, dearest, and she couldn't be better."

Jerry laughed with feeble hysteria, tried to get herself under control. "Then the dresses I bought will come in handy after all."

> BEGIN HERE TODAY:
> It is December, 1929, and the economic world is in ruins. Only JERRY BROCK has no suspicion of it, for her husband, GORDON, who adores her, has kept from her the fact that he suffered heavy losses in the market crash. He feels that he must because Jerry is expecting a baby. Gordon goes with her to the hospital, but shrinks back from entering the delivery room. Jerry's best friend, BARBARA HILTON, goes instead, and so she hears Jerry cry a name in her agony. The name is not Gordon, but Ross, and ROSS TAYLOR is a man Jerry thought she had put out of her mind long ago.
> NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

She shivered again, her teeth chattered. A low competent voice said, "Only a chill," and hot water bottles were arranged around her.

A nurse came in, walking softly on her rubber soles, smiling, a pink wrapped bundle in her arms.

"Would you like to see your daughter?"

Jerry tried again to open her eyes, but a wave of nausea swept over her. "Can't see. Sorry. Tomorrow. Very glad to make your acquaintance tomorrow."

A thin little wail came from the bundle. "She's crying!" Barbara exclaimed.

"Sure," said Jerry in the high quavering voice. "She's hungry! Give her a ham sandwich and a cup of coffee!"

"Atta girl, keep crackin' 'em!" applauded Bob Hamish, his own voice none too steady. It was dreadful to see Jerry like this, so weak, so unlike herself, and yet trying gallantly to preserve the light touch.

Barbara pushed Bob toward the door, motioned imperiously for the others to follow. "Come on, get out! Let the girl have some rest!" She followed the nurse who was carrying the baby back to the nursery.

Jerry's hand groped toward Gordon. "Disappointed, Gordon, that it wasn't a little son?"

He seized her hands and kissed them over and over. "Disappointed! It was a girl I wanted all the time!"

And now Jerry played the Madonna, with modern touches. Wearing a succession of real lace nightgowns, purchased just for this occasion because the hospital did not allow pajamas, an elaborate satin bed jacket about her shoulders, her hair brushed until it gleamed, made up as carefully as for a party, reclining against the pillows, she received her friends and gave dramatic recitals of her recent experiences and feelings.

She had been afraid of her daughter at first meeting, she explained to everyone. It was her first sight of a new baby, her first hand to hand encounter with any baby, and she had not conducted herself with distinction.

All that about maternal instinct was the bunk, she assured her listeners, at least in the early stages. She was just plain scared, much more so than Gordon had been. Her daughter had displayed rare social presence, however, and there had been no really embarrassing pauses.

* * *

IT was when Susan, as they had finally decided to call her, was three days old that rapport had first been established between mother and child. Up to that time they had been polite to each other at each meeting, but hardly cordial. Sizing each other up, as it were.

On the day in question, however, Miss Ellis, the day nurse, had been called away during one of Susan's visits to her mother, and for the first time Jerry had been alone and at the mercy of her child. Susan began to cry, in fact, to howl, waving her dark little claws in the air, her magenta face turning a deep purple, and all with sheer rage.

"Then I knew where we were," declared Jerry. "I recognized that little piece of heredity right off the bat. I said, 'Look here, young lady, you may think you're good at drawing attention to yourself, but you're dealing with an expert!' She stopped yelling and looked at me. And ever since, it's been just like a Mammy song!"

Jerry made it all very amusing as she held up each new emotion and sensation for analysis, and her room, overflowing with the rarest and most expensive flowers, was a constant center of gaiety.

When Barbara Hilton was alone with her, though, and Jerry was relieved of the compulsion she always felt in a group to keep things going, she was quieter and gentler.

Barbara, having witnessed Susan's entry into the world, was taking an intense, possessive interest in the infant. She persuaded Miss Ellis to let her watch the bath each morning and then went to Jerry's room for the 10 o'clock feeding. Miss Ellis would often leave them, seizing this opportunity for a chat in the corridor with one of the other specials, and the two girls would hang absorbed over the tiny thing.

"She has a distinct personality already," Barbara insisted. "Really. She's not a bit like the other babies in the nursery. She seems to know loads more than they do."

"If you ask me, she knows more than I do," Jerry murmured, speaking quietly so as not to disturb the feeding child. "Look at the knowingness of that eye! And oh, Barbara, did you ever see anything more exquisite than those hands?"

Susan lay tranquilly on Jerry's arm, her hands spread out like butterfly wings. The fingers were rosy now, transparent, the infinitesimal fingers tapering, each nail a perfect almond shape with a tiny half moon at the base.

"I dreamed last night I broke one off," Jerry said softly. "She seems too fragile to be touched, doesn't she? I can hardly bear it when I realize that it's such a little time she'll be like this, so tiny and helpless, because there's nothing in the world as sweet as a tiny baby. Now I can understand how Bette felt! I don't blame her for wanting one on hand all the time."

Barbara's slim white finger insinuated itself gently into the rosy little palm, she felt a thrill when the tiny figers closed over it. She sat without stirring until Miss Ellis came to take Susan back to the nursery.

And in all this time, Jerry had no suspicion that the golden stream had stopped as suddenly as though some giant hand had turned off a faucet.

* * *

THIS was a time when men worked desperately though with hope in their hearts, to hold foundering businesses together until the storm should have abated. No one doubted then that the storm would abate, and that everything would be as it had been before. Most prophets thought it would be a matter of days and weeks. Pessimists suggested months.

Like many another man in similar case, Barbara's father had recovered his courage after the first stunning blow and was making the nerve wracking fight which was foreordained to end in failure.

They did not know then that those were the lucky ones who had lost everything beyond redemption on the first drop of the market, and so were spared the long, bitter, hopeless struggle.

At this time they thought they were fortunate in having something left to fight for. And so Barbara's life went on as before and Jerry prided herself on her wisdom in having predicted so accurately the turn of events.

Since they were not to have a home of their own to move into when Jerry was ready to leave the hospital with the baby, the Brocks had arranged to take the Stiller place until the new house should be built. This was a show place of Huntington, rented furnished most of the time by the owners, who spent practically all of their time abroad.

Gordon had signed a lease, and paid a thumping sum to bind it. While Jerry was in the hospital, he was to move in, a matter of transferring clothing and personal effects only, and Mrs. Richards was to lend them Martha to train the staff of maids and have everything in good running order for Jerry.

Gordon had not mentioned moving, but Jerry thought nothing of that. The mechanics of life always moved so effortlessly that Jerry was accustomed to dismissing a small matter like a move with a wave of the hand.

Furthermore, Gordon was maudlin over his new daughter and talked mostly of her when he was with Jerry, how pretty she was, how bright for her age, his plans for her. Like Barbara, he held that Susan was vastly superior to the other inmates of the nursery, and tried to convince Jerry, who pretended to be skeptical, that this was so.

Jerry was taken completely by surprise therefore when, toward the end of her stay at the hospital, she asked some question about the Stiller place and was told by Gordon in a broken, confused way, that he and her mother had decided to change the plan. The Brocks were to go to the Richards' home instead.

"Wh—but Gordon—!"

"I hope you don't mind!" Gordon was so distressed and anxious that she had to smile and assure him that she did not.

"Only—shouldn't I have been informed? I've been telling everyone we were going to the Stiller house. I even told the girls they could have the Junior League benefit bridge there, because the drawing room is so big. No one said a word to me. Mother, Martha, you—what else are you all keeping from me?"

TODAY'S PATTERN

AA 2184

WHETHER you're a perfect 34 or much larger, this dress is likely to intrigue you. The tucked sleeves break the line of an upper arm should it happen to have an extra bit of flesh there, and the tucks release into a flaring or puffed sleeve. The contrasting jabot-revers which appear to button onto the collar are very smart and new. It is said two colors double one's chic this season—you may use print or small dotted crepe for the dress, but by all means use white or a contrasting color for the jabot. It's a grand dress for silk now, and later for swiss, lawn or voile.

Pattern 2184 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3¾ yards 30-inch fabric and ⅞ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

The Greatness Of Spirit in Dr. Johnson

By The Rev. J. F. Newton

"WHY did you overlook Dr. Johnson," asks a reader a little peeved, "on the 150th anniversary of his death a couple of months ago? It was lovely to remember Charles Lamb, but why forget the 'old struggler'?"

The fact is, I had forgotten that the Doctor was dead. He was so very much alive when I met him a few months ago, walking up Fleet Street, past Temple Bar to "Ye Cheshire Cheese," and on past Oxford and Lichfield and the Hebrides, that the talk about his death seemed ridiculous.

"My dear friend, clear your mind of cant," he was saying with his familiar gesture; and he went on talking about the "improved life," by which he meant the life of men and of societies made dignified and beautiful by order and culture and the profound faith of religion.

It seemed best just to let him go on talking about himself, about life and letters, about the friends he loved so much and the foes he hated so little. One does not often hear such good sense amidst the dreary twittering of our hard-boiled but half-baked generation.

Of his own tenderness and charity and fortitude, he said nothing; it was not necessary to speak. One remembered how he picked up a poor outcast and carried her home on his back—a picture which anyone who likes may call grotesque—and cared for her to the end.

It seemed to me, listening to his talk, and unable to get in a word edge-wise, that Johnson was one of the great interpreters of religion. He talked simply of the love of God, as if that were all we need to face life, death, and the strange baffling mystery of being.

Yet I remembered his life-long fear of death, and how he was unable to sleep without a lamp burning in his room. It was at once the weakest and the noblest thing about him—like a child, yet so human.

At the end, stricken in the night with paralysis, all his fear of death left him. He "prayed God, that however He might afflict my body, He would spare my understanding"; and his last prayer was answered. So passed a noble man into the land of the immortals.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

» by WYNN «

For Sunday, Feb. 17, 1935.

CARELESSLY or otherwise, we make our future—at least three-quarters of it. Today is a good one for making plans ahead. Be creative and original in what you build for yourself. But don't be selfish about it.

Percentages.

If you were intellectually 15 per cent of what you could be, or physically 30 per cent of what you could be, you would be above the average human being of today. Most of us do not realize what wonderful equipment we possess, even in these two, the lower half of our being. As to the upper half (soul and spirit) we are probably better than average if we can register a 5 per cent expression of talent.

Your Year Ahead.

Your year ahead shows travels as costly, extravagant. Bring the element of distance into occupation: import, export, advertising, etc.—expand, cover ground. Danger: Sept. 4 to Oct. 20; and Dec. 30 to Feb. 14, 1936.

For Monday, Feb. 18.

RATHER peppy—likewise rather unreliable. Peppy in action; unreliable in emotions. Keep actions constructive and steer out for feelings and temptations. Deal gently with those older or weaker than yourself; be sympathetic.

Aim High.

Before you decide on how much of your equipment you are using properly on the four levels of life (body, intellect, soul and spirit) be sure you have a really good idea of how much equipment you truly have. Don't compare yourself with your neighbor—he or she may be less than perfect, too. Compare yourself with 100 per cent to obtain your true grade on each level. Strive for the ideal.

Your Year Ahead.

Your year ahead brings responsibilities—shoulder them. Cultivate existing and make new friends, they can be of aid in occupational progress just now. Danger: Sept. 6 to Oct. 21, and Jan. 1 to Feb. 15, 1936.

Tomorrow.

Good for creative development in arts and sciences, but little else.

(Copyright, 1935.)

Cleansing Hints

In washing dishes use very hot water and soap suds and rinse quickly. If there is plenty of space put the soapy dishes in a rinsing rack at once and let the hot water pour over them. Dry with toweling and no other polish or brightener will be required. But if you have any china decorated with gilt do not use excessively hot water or it will be injured.

Water is apt to discolor and crack knife handles, unless when made entirely of silver. Scour the blades of the knives and then wash them, while holding the handles so that they are out of the water.

Movie Time Table

AMBASSADOR—Margaret Sullavan and Herbert Marshall in "The Good Fairy," at 10:45, 1:30, 4:15, 7:05 and 9:50; stage show at 12:30, 3:20, 6:05 and 8:55.

FOX—Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter in "One More Spring," at 1:30, 4:15, 7 and 9:45; "The Ghost Walks," at 12:15, 3, 5:50 and 8:35.

LOEW'S—"Sequoia," with Jean Parker and Russell Hardie, at 11:25, 2:13, 5:01, 7:49 and 10:37; "The Night Is Young," at 10, 12:48, 3:36, 6:24, 9:12.

Rare, But Not Raw

There is a great difference between rare roast beef and raw roast beef. Serve it rare but be sure it is cooked long enough to be digestible.

A little vanilla adds flavor to cocoa or hot chocolate.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE POWER OF ALGEBRA—The "power" of an equation is indicated by its "exponent," meaning a number symbol which shows how many equal factors entered into the power. When the concept of the exponent was broadened in algebra, new exponential types were introduced, to which definite meanings had to be assigned. It was thus determined that any quantity, large or small, whose exponent was 0, was to be regarded as equal to 1.

THE MOST LUCKLESS FISHERMAN—O. H. Bell of Chillicothe, Tex., is undoubtedly one of the unluckiest fishermen ever to dangle a lure into the waters of stream, pool or lake, because in six years of patient effort he has never even felt the quiver of a fish on his line. Bell buys the best tackle, baits and flies obtainable. He fishes in abundant waters alongside other successful anglers. Yet his luck never changes. He says he will continue his efforts for another six years before he finally gives up.

MONDAY: THE STRANGEST OF ALL MATHEMATICAL WIZARDS.

Solitary Cheat

By Hal G. Vermes

SLIM HANLON reached for the folded newspaper on the table. As he opened it, something fluttered to his lap. Slim looked; it was a $10 bill. Quickly crushing it in his hand, he shoved it into his pocket.

Imagine finding money in a shack like this! Ten bucks! Why, he wouldn't give that for the whole ramshackle, dilapidated house. But there was something funny about that money. Old men living in shacks don't leave dough around where any one can pick it up.

Maybe it was a plant!

No, sir, he didn't want to do another stretch not for 10 lousy bucks. Slim took the bill out of his pocket regretfully, flattened the creases, and put it back between the pages of the newspaper. He tossed it on the table as his pal, Bill Lambert and the old man came in with the supper.

After they had eaten, Slim took a pack of cards out of his pocket and played solitaire. He puzzled over the layout for awhile and then moved the jack of diamonds on the queen of hearts. That left him a vacancy so that he was able to continue the play.

The old man sat and watched as Slim deftly slipped the greasy cards from the top of the deck.

About 9 o'clock their host took a candle and led the way to their separate rooms in the attic. He lighted the candles on their dressers and, with a soft-spoken goodnight, went downstairs.

Bill Lambert undressed slowly, tired from the long day's hike. His clothes were still wet from the snow and he laid them carefully over the frame of the iron bed so they would dry. He noticed a little box on the dresser and opened it. Bill's eyes blinked in surprise. There was twenty-one dollars—three five dollar bills and six ones.

Bill sighed, folded the bills, tapped the roll and put it back in the box. In bed, he tried to sleep but couldn't get the money out of his mind. He needed so little.

Bill got out of bed. Getting a stub of pencil from his coat pocket, he found a scrap of paper and scribbled a note. "I am borrowing a dollar," he wrote, "and will return it within a week." Then he took out a bill and put the note in the box.

The snow had stopped falling by morning. The old man woke them early and gave them plenty of hot coffee and bread. "To help you keep warm on the long hike to the city," he murmured with a smile. As they got ready to leave, he asked for their addresses. "Like to know who my occasional guests are," he explained.

It was months later that Slim sat at dinner with a friend. "Here's a funny one," his friend said, indicating the evening paper. "'Aged recluse leaves fortune to honest man,'" he read aloud. "'Anthony Robbins, who lived in a shack on Lone Mountain road for many years, wills $100,000 to honest stranger. His attorneys conceal identity of heir at request of client. They state that—'"

* * *

SLIM almost choked on his cup of coffee. "Let me have that paper!" he yelled. Tearing it from Al's hands, he hurriedly read the news item. Sure enough! It was the old man who had given Bill Lambert and him a place to sleep the previous winter.

Bill had just got home when Slim arrived and they went up to his room. Slim spread the newspaper on the bed.

"Take a look at that, big boy!" he crowed, pointing at the news item.

Bill read it while Slim danced around the room. "Why, that's where we stopped last winter!"

"You're telling me!" Slim laughed. "Didn't I say it was a plant? And Mr. Slim Hanlon didn't take a cent!"

"Gee," Bill said, "I sent back that dollar I borrowed just as soon as I got paid."

"But I didn't touch a dime of the old bozo's money," Slim pointed out. "Not that I didn't want to. But I was too wise for him and figured it was a frameup." Slim pulled on his cap. "Well, so long, Bill," he yelled as he went down the stairs. "Don't pick up any red hot pennies!"

The next morning there was a letter for Slim from Balcomb & O'Shea, attorneys. Expecting it, Slim met the postman at the door. On the step, heedless of the rain, he opened the letter and read it hurriedly.

"I have asked my attorneys to send you this letter after my death," it ran. "When you see the newspaper stories about my hunt for an honest man, I know you will think that I chose you instead of Bill Lambert because you did not take any of the money I left around to test people. But you lose because nobody but a crook would cheat at solitaire."

Let's EXPLORE Your MIND

By ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM, D. Sc.

See Whether His Opinions Agree With Your Own

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

1. —I think they do. While they are likely to set up in the other children both inferiority and resentment, they set up in the favored child a priggishness and egotism which is going to go hard with it when it goes up against a real world that does not favor anybody. It is easier, even for parents to love some children more than others, but it is ruinous to permit this to become obvious.

2. —Any job men do not like they always discover women can do better and therefore they gladly admit it is "woman's work." Men do not like to wash dishes, sew, knit, take care of babies, manage weddings and social affairs, so they admit with enthusiasm these are women's jobs. But when men spy a job they like, it instantly becomes "man's work." Here the controversy begins. I cannot settle it here except to say that perhaps 90 per cent of all human jobs can be done as well by women as by men, and many of them are actually done much better.

3. —In the set-up of human nature pictured by Adam Smith and others in their "economic man," no. All normal men want to win, and achieve, but the vast majority of people work on salaries—teachers, professors, soldiers, clerks, accountants, etc. They have to have a salary in order to live and all would like a better salary, but in most cases the chief drive is not to secure a higher salary, but to do a good job of work. While the profit motive will be important in any economic scheme, yet I think its importance has been over-estimated.

Tantrums Simply The Child's Lack Of Adjustment

By Mrs. Brooke P. Church

THE child who threatens to hold its breath until it is black in the face is not an unusual phenomenon. Frequently it does not even make the threat, but, having found by experience that the act alone will serve, holds its breath without warning, and generally gets a speedy response from those about it.

Mothers, nurses, teachers, relatives hasten to capitulate lest the child have a fit. And, of course, the child, rejoicing in its power, repeats the performance whenever it wishes to gain a point.

Adults are apt to be over solicitous about the child. Some yield at once to the child's demands, others try punishment, still others worry and fret lest the child do itself an injury during one of these tantrums.

There is generally reason for anxiety, but not in the tantrum itself. The tantrum is merely a symptom of an underlying lack of adjustment. To find the cause should be the parents' endeavor. But not while the display of temper lasts.

The tantrum itself may be treated either by an immediate shock, such as a glass of cold water dashed in the child's face, or sudden immersion in a tub of cool water; or, far better, by utter indifference. Whatever the underlying cause of the display of temper, the immediate effort of the child is to get attention or to gain some wish. The child will not really hold its breath long enough to smother. When it needs breath it will get it again, and the quicker, if it finds that the effort is doing it no good.

They Have Good Training

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

SEEMS that every boy has a chance to become president of an insurance company. Cal Coolidge wound up in that business. Al Smith took a whirl at it, and Herbert Hoover is again casting shadows on a glass door.

* * *

It has solved the question of what to do with our ex-presidents. The answer is, buy some insurance off them.

* * *

Al never got to the White House. But a man who gets 10,000,000 votes has good contacts. The next thing is to persuade those 10,000,000 to make the first down payment.

* * *

On the last of each month the lady of the house will step out on porch and say, "When I voted for you, Mr. Hoover, I didn't think you would come around ringing my doorbell."
